Mould on Butter

Complaints are received from time to time, at the Dairy Division, Ottawa, regarding the appearance of mould on the parchment paper linings of butter packages. In some cases it is said to have penetrated the butter for some distance. Mould is a minute and low form of plant life. It grows from seeds, which are called spores, and which develop only in the presence of moisture and where they have a suitable supply of food. Mould will grow readily on damp wood; hence the necessity for keeping the interior of a creamery, and especially the refrigerating room, as dry as possible.

Poorly constructed refrigeratorsare apt to be damp, because the warm air which gets in from outside carries moisture with it, which is deposited on the cooler surfaces of the walls, floors and packages. Frequent and prolonged opening of the doors also causes dampness.

Prevention of mould in the factory.—It would be a good thing for the creamery owners, as well as for the trade generally, if it were compulsory to have all creameries thoroughly disinfected every spring before operations begin. The spores of mould, and other germs which cause bad flavors, are destroyed if the work is properly done. It is a comparatively simple and inexpensive operation, if the following plan is adopted.

Methods of disinfection:—Wash the whole interior of the creamery, including walls, ceilings, floors, posts, shelving, etc., with a solution of one part of bichloride of mercury to one thousand parts of water. Apply with a brush and scrub well wherever applied. The bi-chloride of mercury (corrosive sublimate) may be procured in a tablet form, of the right strength to make the above solution by adding one tablet to every pint of water used. This substance is a deadly poison and must be handled with every care and precaution. Formalin may also be used, either as a spray or by being allowed to evaperate from a sheet of cotton suspended in the room, when the doors, windows and other openings are tightly closed. It requires about five ounces of pure formalin to disinfect 1000 cubic feet.

Prevention of mould on butter:—As a preventive of mould on butter, the following proctice is highly recommended: Soak the parchment paper linings, immediately before using in a saturated brine to which has been added one ounce of pure formalin to three gallons of brine. Place the paper in the boxes without drying. Keep the brine in a special covered vessel. Boil the brine every week and add fresh formalin in the same proportion as at first. This treatment has been found effective in the government creameries in the Northwest Territories, where there was a great deal of trouble with mould at one time, and has given good satisfaction wherever it has been properly carried out.

Care of parchment paper and empty boxes:—Probably much of the mould on butter is due to the infection of the parchment paper as it lies about the creamery without any protection and not always in a dry place. The spores do not develop on the dry paper, but as soon as it comes in contact with the butter there is sufficient moisture to encourage the growth of the mould. The parchment paper and empty packages should be kept in a thoroughly dry, clean place.

Quality of parchment paper important. Only the very best vegetable parchment paper should be used. Inferior paper encourages the growth of mould and does not protect the butter. Much of the paper is too light in weight. A ream of 500 sheets measuring 50 x 12½ inches should weigh at least 40 pounds, and the same number of sheets 38 x 12½ should weigh not less than 30 pounds, and other sizes in proportion. Yours very truly,

Publication Clerk

Joseph Wardman, Beeton, was fined $10 and costs for allowing minors to throw dice for drinks in his hotel.

The man who says he can do all the business he wants to without advertising would be wonderfully surprised if every other business man thought the same and the weekly newspaper quit the field. Nobody is foolish enough to think that the men who spend thousands of dollars annually in advertising are doing this purely in a philanthropic regard for poor editors. These parties are advertising to make money for themselves and for no other purpose.—Ex.

As an illustration of how a little country village may become intimately associated with the names of the prominent men who shape the destinies of Canada we may take Bondhead in Simcoe county. There Sir William Mulock was born in 1843. There Canon Osler was rector and reared three talented sons, the late E. B. Osler, Judge Osler and Professor Osler of Johns Hopkins University. There Dr. William Fraser labored for half a century in the Presbyterian church, being for very many years clerk of the General Assembly, and reared a large family three of whom have attained prominence; Dr. J. B. Fraser, for some time associated with Dr. McKay in Formosa, now minister at Annan; Professor W. H. Fraser, in charge of Italian and Spanish in the University of Toronto, and Rev. P. Douglas Fraser, the energetic manager of the Sabbath School Publications of the Presbyterian church in Canada. There also was born Judge Mahaffy, of Muskoka, and, if we mistake not, his brother, Mr. A. A. Mahaffy, M. P. P. for Muskoka. On an adjoining farm, too, the late Senator Landerkin was brought up.

That honesty is the best policy was exemplified to one person in a costly manner on Wednesday of this week. A farmer named John Cairncross, an Amabel resident, bargained with Saul Putman for a cord of maple cordwood at $5. He delivered a nice half cord and collected his money. Saul gave the case to Chief Grasser, who measured the wood, and then laid a complaint against the man from Amabel. Yesterday Mr. Cairncross come to town through the storm and refunded to J. M. McNab, J. P., $2.50 on the wood deal and paid into court $7 62 for his experience. It served him right.—Southampton Beacon.
