The Budget Debate

Ottawa, May 9.

We are to have an election whether we want it or not. Roars of applause, and indistinguishable din of utterance greeted the Prime Minister's announcement. Excitement ran high. Here and there a member jumped to his feet, waving a blue book, or the white "Orders of the Day." A frenzy swept the House, and presented to the packed galleries a spectacle unparalleled since the memorable session of 1926. So prolonged was the cheering, so deaf the House to the Speaker's call for "Order", that it looked for a time as if it would be necessary to adjourn the House forthwith. The only section of the House that preserved its calm was in the Southeast corner, where sit the Independent groups. Yet with all the apparent approval of the announcement the great majority of members did not want an election this year, and I believe the same could be said of the major part of the electors. Under our system the Prime Minister can announce an election when he will.

The Prime Minister's anouncement has been timed to take full advantage of the packed galleries, drawn thither to hear Mr. B. Bennett, the Leader of the Opposition. Mr. Bennett's reply to the Budget was awaited with intense interest by the members of the commons and the many visitors could be taken as an indication of the general public's interest. His speech was long, but a good-fighting partisan speech withal. He took the expected ground of approval in regard to the upward changes in the tariff. He challenged not the Budget, but right of the Liberal Party to bring down a protectionist Budget. He pointed out that it was the sogation of the declared fiscal policy of the Liberal party,and challenged the Government to resign and turn over the power to the real protectionist party. In regard to British preference, Mr. Bennett left the impression that he would not agree to an increase in the British preference unless Britain granted equal privileges to Canada. He spoke for nearly three hours, at times tediously, at other times arousing his followers to frenzied excitement. He twitted Mr. Dunning for having cast his followers from Saskatchewan to the wolves, and to the amusement of the farm group, he made an effective attack on T. A. Crerar—"He left the Government (Union) for conscience sake; he came back because of lack of conscience. He left the government because of a duty on steel and iron of six dollars. Mr. Bennett made one statement which had a very dramatic effect. Mr. King had enquired,—"What about the British Empire?" And Mr. Bennett replied, "I am for the British Empire—next to Canada." It seems we have lived to see a shifting of loyalties. Once the Conservative Party was pretty much "Empire," the Liberal more national. At the moment it appears the other way about.

Mr. Irving was the first speaker from the farmer's group. He emphasized that at last it was clear to everyone that there was no fundamental difference between the major parties on tariff. He reminded the House that Mr. Dunning and Mr. King in speaking in the West last year, pleaded for the unity of the low tariff forces. "Come with me," says Mr. King, "Into the ranks of the low tariff party." Yet in this Budget we have illustrations of protection gone mad. Possibly his best sentence was, "The Liberal Party has come out squarely for protection. It is the part of the irony of fate that it should have fallen to the lot of the first Western Minister of Finance to drop the cut flowers of British preference on the mangled corpse of free trade." The list of articles coming in free from Great Britain included cut flowers.

The Prime Minister consulted Mr. Bennett and Mr. Gardiner regarding the possibility of hurrying the session through on the understanding that the revision of the Pensions Act, and the Canadian Grain Act and other slightly less important measures would be passed first. One can clearly see that no further serious work will be done by this Parliament. The announcement of the election has transferred all their interest to their constituencies. The remainder of the week has been dull and uneventful.

I greatly enjoyed addressing the teachers in training at the Normal School on the work of the League as I observed it when attending the Assembly last September. They were exceedingly keen. Such groups of young people give one hope.

Sincerely,
AGNES C. MACPHAIL

The Fight Is On

The United Farmers of South Grey are to meet in Durham on May 24th to choose a candidate for the forthcoming federal election. Without a doubt the nomination will be given to Miss Agnes Macphail, who has kept U. F. O. principles alive in this riding and who has been victorious in the three past elections. In North Grey a farmer, Victor Porteous, of Derby township, has been chisen to uphold the Conservative principles. Miss Macphail's opponent will be Dr. L. G. Campbell of Markdale, who was chosen some time ago as the Conservative candidate. When Parliament prorogues the campaign will commence in earnest and election propaganda will be filling the air. The Campaign is expected to be short and snappy, although there is no outstanding decision to be made by the electors.

Already members have started to drift back to their constituencies to complete their organizations and to arrange their conventions, where they have not been held. Another two weeks will see the campaign in active progress, though the party leaders are unlikely to get into action on the platform before the first of June. Radio and direct mail publicity will take a more important part in the campaign, though the older forms of advertising are not to be neglected. Headquarters of both parties insist that there will be diffusion of publicity on an unprecedented scale and that electors will go ti the polls equipped with a wider knowledge of the issues than ever before.

A REMARKABLE CROP

In 1929 James McKitrick of Orton in Wellington County harvested 511 bags of marketable potatoes off two acres. The field in which this remarkable crop was grown was of a light loam. The potatoes which were of the Green Mountain variety, were planted on June 10, after a sweet clover pasture had been turned under in the fall along with about ten tons of barnyard manure per acre. An application of 900 pounds to the acre of 4—8—10 commercial fertilizer was made after planting. The crop was sprayed for late blight every two weeks after the potatoes were up six or eight inches.

CLEANING OF SEED GENERAL

The crop bulletin for the first week in April stresses the general turn of Ontario farmers toward the cleaning of seed. Inquiries in Dufferin have been numerous for good seed of standard varieties. In Dundas the uncertainty of the milk market situation is having a very depressing effect on production. The average price received at a sale of Holsteins in Durham was set at $145. A shortage of grain is indicated in Frontenac while a heavy demand is being made for good seed oats and parley. Exceptionally favorable reports from sheep flock masters have been received from Grey, while an increased acreage in spring wheat is reported in Hastings. Shipments of western horses are meeting a slow sale in Huron, while in Lambton seed grain is more plentiful than was expected.
