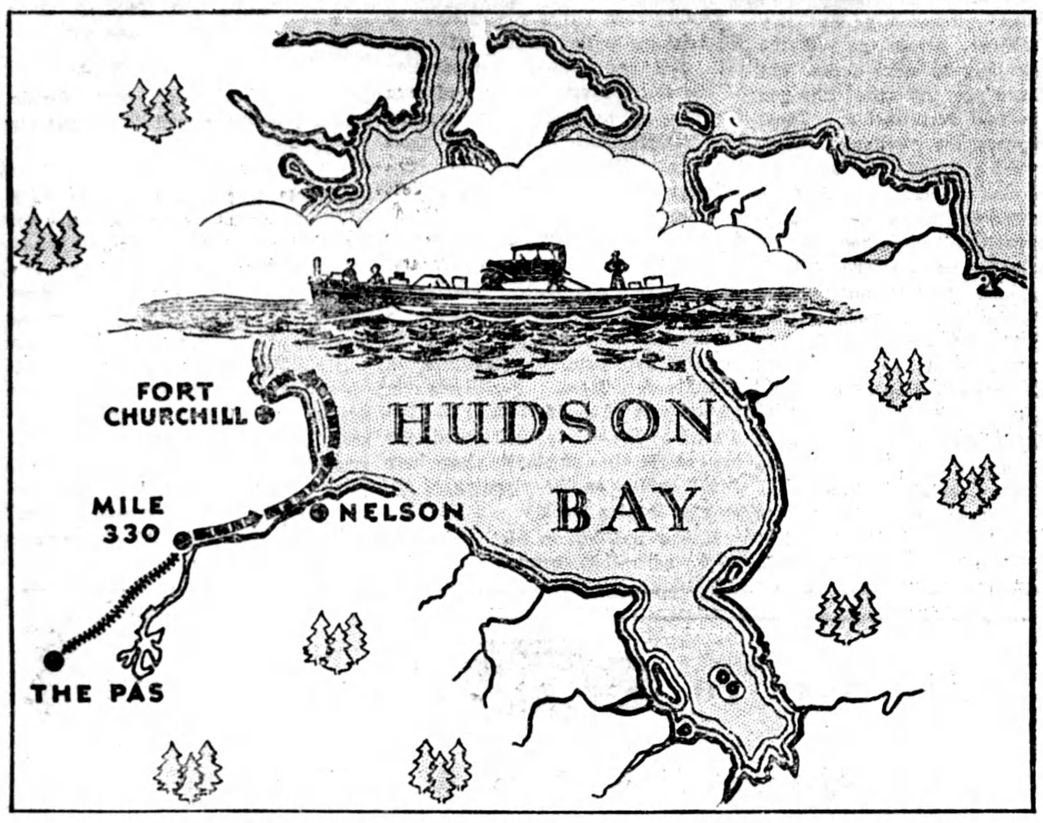
Fur Trader's Sea-going Car is First to Reach Bleak Shores of Hudson's Bay



Route Taken by the Sea-going Ford from The Pas to Fort Churchill.

ESKIMOS and Indians watched in amazement when Henry Hudson's staunch little ship, The Discovery, sailed along the shores of the vast inland sea which later was to bear the name of the expedition's leader.

Although The Discovery displaced but 55 tons, she was to them a veritable Majestic. The excitement spread from tribe to tribe from the time the vessel pushed its way through the ice and was caught sight of from the shores until it reached the southernmost limits of James Bay, 1300 miles away.

That was 320 years ago. But the astonishment was scarcely greater than that among the descendants of those Eskimos and Indians when a strange craft recently rolled its way along off the coast of that same body of water.

This was a sea-going Ford, the first automobile of any sort ever to be seen in the Hudson's Bay country. It was mounted on a scow and its motor geared to the scow's propeller, so that it proceeded under its own power.

Nor was that its only claim to distinction, for it was one of the first four cars at The Pas, Manitoba.

Recently it was sold to a fur trader named Harris, who has lived among the Eskimos for years. He shipped it by rail to Mile 330 at the Nelson River, at that time the end of the steel on the Hudson's Bay Railway.

Car Propels Boat

There the rear wheels were removed from the car and the ends of gasoline drums substituted. Belts were placed over these and arranged to drive the propeller of the scow.

The fur trader, his Eskimo wife, three children and another white man then climbed aboard and the strange craft headed down the river to Port Nelson. There additional supplies were loaded and the Ford-propelled packet headed for the open sea, swinging northward along the coast toward Fort Churchill, 200 miles away.

Mr. Harris intended to run the Ford over the barren lands about Fort Churchill in collecting fur.

Other cars probably will be seen soon on the shores of Hudson's Bay, for Fort Churchill has now been decided upon as the terminus of the Hudson's Bay Railway instead of Port Nelson. When the steel bonds linking it with civilization are completed, it may speedily become a center of activity boasting as many cars as The Pas, which now number forty.

Tremendous development is expected with the completion of the railway and the harnessing of the enormous undeveloped water power of the Nelson River—the old voyageur route to the Peace, Athabasca and Mackenzie valleys.

FOUR-LEGGED CHICK

Joseph Quigley, local blacksmith, has a real freak in a four-legged chick. Along with 13 others it was hatched on Tuesday and has two perfect sets of legs and feet, the extra pair being just in front of the usual two. Unfortunately the curiosity did not live. The egg from which it was hatched was laid by one of Mr. Quigley's barred rock hens.—Orangeville Sun.

The following notice has been posted at an electric station in Ireland:—

Beware. To touch these wires is instant death. Anyone found doing so will be prosecuted..

"I suppose you know your little town fairly well," remarked the recent arrival to the oldest inhabitant."

"Rather."

"Do you know Jew's walk."

"No."

"Well, they do" replied the recent arrival as he dodged around the corner.

Care of Teeth Is Of Vital Importance

Neglect of the teeth is sure to result in toothache. This means irritability and suffering with impartment and loss of tooth structure.

Food masticated by poor teeth and diseased gums becomes infected with bacteria, which taken into the stomach seriously interfere with nutrition by disturping digestion ;ll health must follow.

The human mouth presents most favorable conditions for growth of dangerous germs if the debris from different kinds of food is allowed to remain, the moisture and natural armth being exactly suited to their development.

The teeth being largely lime, any acid long remaining in contact with them erodes the surfaces, finally softening and destroying the structure.

An excessive acid condition of the mouth may result from systemic or local causes—the taking of certain medicinal preparations; indgeston and dyspepsia; particles of food remaining about the teeth which with the heat of the mouth, decompose and produce acid; excessive use of sweets which fermenting generate acid; continued use of sour wines, fruits, etc. Certain forms of bacteria produce acid, and there are bacteria which develop only in an acid medium.

Do not put off visiting the dentist every four or, at least, six months, that he may have an opportunity of making a careful examination of the teeth, removing any tartar and being sure that everything is right.

Do not wait until there is pain—often means loss of tooth structure, and a trying ordeal for both patient and dentist.

By following these simple suggestions the mouth will be kept in a perfectly healthy condition, and the structure and color of the teeth preserved.
