Offered to Treat Cops

While Prov. Constable Johnston of Kitchener and another officer were motoring to Walkerton on Friday last they encountered car trouble on the detour near Mildmay and stopped to fix it. Another car a short distance away was also in difficulties and a garageman was engaged in making adjustments. When the driver of the latter bus saw the cops. he held up a bottle and shouted, "Come on, boys, we will help you."

The officers went up, took the bottle out of his hand, seized some other liquor found in the car and brought him and his companion on to Walkerton, where they were ushered before Magistrate Walker and he and his chum were released from custody poorer but wiser men. —Walkerton Herald & Times.

Keep Them Clean

Elaborate barns and expensive equipment are not necessary in the production of clean milk although they do help. More important is the keeping of the stable clean and washing and sterilizing of the equipment in use. Following this there must be proper cooling of the cream or milk, and if selling cream, frequent deliveries must be made, especially during the hot weather. No creameryman is in a position to make the highest grade of butter from cream that is not clean and of good flavor. A dairyman can greatly assist in raising the score of our Canadian butter. Of course there must be proper equipment and care in the creamery. Too often cream is held too long at the farm to make first-class butter.

Remodeling of Farm

This is the building season on the farm. Although there will not be many new barns built this year, there will be the usual amount of remodelling of cow stables. The stables should be constructed to keep out cold and conserve the animal heat, at the same time letting the air move through the stable by some well designed ventilating measure. In most cases the barns having the poorest ventilation facilities are those where the outside temperature is too low The following suggestions could be followed to good advantage by dairy farmers: Don't have the stable too high; eight feet to the bottom joists is plenty. Have as few doors as possible and have them tight. Four square feet of window lights per cow is sufficient. Insula the walls. Warm stables are desirable from every standpoint—if well ventilated.

Little Alice had a very bad cold Holding up a rose to her mother's nose she asked: "Does it smell sweet Mummy?" "Yes, dear," the mother answered. "Can't you smell it yourself?" Alice shook her head solemly. "No, she said, "my nose is deaf."

Gumbo—I'm the happiest man alive. I've got the finest wife in the country.

Mudd—Yeah, that does make a man happy, having his wife in the country.

The statement was made during the World's Poultry Congress in London, England, that British consumers pay sixty thousand pounds sterling ($300,000) daily for eggs and poultry at this season of the year. Surely there is a great opportunity for Canadian poultrymen in this great British market.
