PLEASE DO NOT SPIT!

We have placed the title of this article in the form of a request rather than of a command or a threat It might well be regarded as a plea for the protection of children. It would be in the interests of all, but it is the children who are particularly menaced by the careless, thoughtless or ignorant individuals who spit promiscuously.

The germs of disease live and multiply in the human body. A person may have such germs in his body and yet be apparently well. There are thousands of persons with tuberculosis who do not know that they have the disease, and these persons are passing out myriads of germs in their sputum.

These germs leave the body in its secretions of the mouth and nose Mouth and nose secretions should always be thought of as containing disease germs, and should be avoided accordingly.

There is no reason for spitting as so many do. It is simply a bad habit which should never be started. If it is already a habit, then it should be broken without delay. It is not only disgusting to other people but it constitutes a very real danger to them,

In the act of spitting droplets are sprayed around, and as other individuals come in contact with these droplets, they are exposed to infection by the germs of disease from which the spitter may sufeer. Most of the common communicable diseases are spread chiefly by such droplet infection and the danger that results from the spraying around of sputum and saliva cannot be exaggerated, because it is so very serious.

Sputum on the floor or on the ground is dangerous. Children must and will play, and while they play they are constantly on the floor or on the sidewalk or ground. As a result, their hands are sure to become soiled. It is, of course, true that neither children nor adults should put their fingers into their mouths, but it takes time to train children not to do so.

Soiled hands are carried to the face; fingers go in the mouth, and so the sputum from the floor or ground gets into the child's body, and it may carry with it the germs of disease,

Because it is a filthy, disgusting habit, because it spreads disease, because it endangers the lives of children, because there is no reason for it being done, we hope you will treat favorably the request—PLEASE DO NOT SPIT.

USE PLENTY OF LITTER

It is good policy to use an abundance of clean, fresh litter in the laying pens and a poor economy to restrict the quantity even when litter must be purchased. A laying hen is always a happy hen and a hen cannot be happy unless she is busy most of the time. Litter on the floor, especially if it is fresh and clean, is an excellent means of keeping the layers busy even though all grain is being fed in hoppers and none is thrown on the floor. One of the best materials for litter is wheat straw which is not so stiff as rye straw and does not break a easily as oat straw. Litter absorbs considerable moisture from the droppings and from the air of the hen house, and should be changed frequently in wet weather. Moldy straw is always certain to cause trouble and should never be usd in poultry houses.

VALUABLE MEADOW RESULTS

Good ordinary meadow mixtures of clover and timothy can be increased as high as 49 per cent. green weight by proper fertilization. This is the average result of ten carefully conducted tests throughout the province last summer by the Department of Chemistry. In these tests, one-half acre blocks of meadow were measured off during early spring and fertilizer of various mixtures applied. In most cases the fertilizer was sown with the drill.

The average gain for the entire test was a little over a ton per acre green weight. This showed a nice return on the money invested in fertilizers. The addition made to the meadows in these tests averaged about 300 pounds per acre, or represented an investment of five to six dollars per acre.
