Mrs. Thompson's bake shop and residence had a narrow escape from destruction by fire on Monday afternoon, the roof having caught fire with a spark from the chimney. Fortunately it was noticed by neighbors in time and a few pails of water put it out, but not before nearly one-third of the shingles on one side of the roof were burned off.

Mr. Walter Loucks of the little mill had a narrow escape from instantaneous death one day last week While working in the bush near his home the top of a dead tree broke off and in falling struck him on the head, rendering him unconscious, in which condition he remained for half an hour. His prolonged absence caused his father to search for him. The latter arrived on the scene just as his son was regaining consciousness. Had the tree top struck more evenly than it did the result would have been fatal. As it was the call was a close one, and Walter felt the effects for several days.

The following may have some local value and is published for what it is worth: Cobden Village Council has been investigating the cost of sidewalks. In Pembroke, board walks cost 9c a square foot, and endure six to ten years; while cement walks cost 17c a square foot and last, it is supposed, at least sixty years. The Sun says: The members of the council did some figuring and no little surprise was noticeable on the faces of some of them when it was discovered that plank walks in Cobden cost at least 30c. per running foot this year. Assuming that the life of the plank walk be eight years, it meant that it would have to be renewed eight times before the minimum life of a concrete walk had expired. At 30c a foot a board walk in 64 years would cost $2.40, while one foot of concrete walk during the same period would cost, at the rate Pembroke paid for its pavements, 85c. Already this year $325 had been spent in town in building and repairing plank walks.

H. E. Glendinning Dead.

(From the Dundalk Herald,)

A telegram from Swan River, Man., on Tuesday morning brought the sad intelligence of the death there of H. E. Glendinning, whose serious illness the Herald mentioned some weeks ago. Mr. Glendinning died Monday evening at 5 o'clock after a lingering illness from cancer of the stomach. He had suffered extreme pain, and as there was no hope for his recovery death came as a welcome messenger. He was a man of strong Christian character and possessed that faithful trustfulness in the Saviour which enables one to meet the grim messenger unflinchingly, looking forward to the blessed resurrection.

Mr. Glendinning was principal of the public school here for some years and afterwards proprietor of the Herald for some time. He sold out and went to Swan River about five years ago, where he established The Star newspaper and also an extensive real estate business.

His widow and only son Will, who are both well known here, have the deepest sympathy of this community in this sad bereavement. His loss in the home, where his affectionate disposition was seen at its best, will be sorrowfully felt. Outside of the home circle his influence was for good, particularly in church work. He was a member of the session of the Swan River Presbyterian church.
