PROFITING THROUGH SERVICE

When merchants build new stores, add additional sales space, install new fixtures, improve their show windows, augment their sale forces, replenish their stocks with the best and newest, it is for the public. Of cource they are in business for the purpose of making a living, but to make that living they must first give service, so their first objective is always "to serve and please."

"Fair exchange is no robbery" is a business phrase which has been handed down from generation to generation and now seems to have acquired immortality. The laborer exchanges his labor for his wage. The capitalist exchanges his money for his interest. The manufacturer exchanges his products for his cost of production plus profit, the professional man exchanges his services for his fees or his salary, the storekeeper exchanges his goods for cost plus service charge. Everybody is in business for himself by doing business for somebody else. Like the public official, the merchant is in business for society and there fore every member of that society is his employer, his boss.

One of the compensations of business is that public recognition and appreciation come to some sooner than to the businessman who really serves. A flourishing trade is synonymous with public trust and confidence. Service must ever precede success in business.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Some exchanges say that March came in like a lion. If such a thing is true the lion must have had his voice removed in this locality.

• • •

The jack rabbit is a new citizen of this district and our nimrods have scarcely yet discovered just how far you have to aim ahead in order to score a hit, even where his tail is supposed to be located.

• • •

This March set-back to winter is rather discouraging on the automobile owner who desires to get the most for his license money. It is also a little hard on the early spring weather prophet and Globe robin, to say nothing of the poor man's woodpile. It is not without compensations, however, and the most important of these is the assurance of the usual spring supply of moisture to revivify mother earth for the spring planting.

• • •

The Dominion Parliament will open tomorrow at Ottawa. An unusual condition of affairs exists. Parliament, on this occasion, will have to be opened without the aid of a Governor-General, as the newly-appointed executive has not yet arrived on Canadian soil. Such a very serious condition might be avoided by pressing radio into service for the occasion. Someone should have thought of such a solution before this late date. We are not taking enough advantage of our modern inventions.

• • •

We passed a market place in a near by city the other day and were attracted by the beautiful display of vegetables offered for sale. Carrots, beets, parsnips, etc., looked as fresh and appetizing as the day they were harvested. On inquiry we learned that these vegetables had been stored in pits last fall, and they were so attractive that customers could not resist them. Pit storage is the old fashioned way of wintering fruits and vegetables, and we know of no method that will beat it. It is a wonder that this system ever went out of fashion.—Aylmer Express.

REPORT WAS ENDORSED

Ontario through the new marketing council, provided for in the Somerset report, will embark without delay upon sweeping new policies to promote new markets, recapture old ones, and restore to prosperity the fruit and vegetable industry of the province. Announcements of these new policies in a speech by Hon. T. L. Kennedy in Hamilton was followed by an overwhelming vote endorsing the Somerset report by the Association of Fruit Growers of Ontario and the Niagara Fruit Growers' Association in annual convention.

WHAT TO WEAR

Dress according to the weather, not according to the time of year. The amount of clothing required depends upon the temperature, not upon the month or day of the year. Individuals differ; some require to wear more clothing than others in order to keep warm.

The amount of clothing required also depends upon occupation and upon working conditions. In a heated room, no more clothing is required than is worn out doors in summer. Too much clothing causes the body to perspire excessively and then, almost surely, chilling occurs when the individual goes out into the cold.

The habit of not removing out-door clothing when sitting indoors causes perspiration with subsequent chilling, and sometimes this is followed by a cold or some other infection. Chilling of the body should be avoided, and it is pointed out that, as we have said chilling usually results from too much clothing rather than from an insufficiency.

The feet should be kept dry. If we get our feet wet and then sit at home, or at school, or at work, our feet are chilled while the rest of the body remains warm. In some way, this favours the occurrence of colds. If the feet do become wet, shoes and stockings should be changed and the feet given a brisk rub with a towel.

Underclothing is required to protect the outer garments from the perspiration of the body. It also serves as a covering which may be changed as the temperature changes. The outdoor worker in winter usually needs to wear woollen underwear in order that he may keep warm. Wool has the advantage of absorbing perspiration and not allowing rapid evaporation; in this way, the wearing of woollen garments prevents chilling.

Underclothing should be changed as often as it is required to do so to keep it clean. Soiled underwear is offensive, and, besides, it favors the occurence of skin diseases.

Much discomfort and actual disease may be avoided by giving some attention to clothing from a health point of view. The body coverings should be clean. Clothing should be sufficient to keep the body warm. Too much clothing, which causes perspiration, leads to the chilling of the body. sitting with wet feet predisposes to colds so the feet should be kept dry. Remove out-door clothing when indoors, and put on additional clothing before going out.

Do You Remember?

We often wonder how many of our "old-timers" can recall when we put our shirts on over our heads; when anybody could hitchup a horse; when there were no such things as wrist watches; and a hired girl was lucky to get $2.50 a week. Or how many remember when boys collected cigarette papers; when everybody had tonsils and kept 'em; when nobody had appendicitis and most everybody kept the Sabbath. Surely there must be a lot of folks around here who can remember when they carried a lantern on the dashboard of the spring wagon and drove it through mud and dirt most of the time; when they slept on a straw tick and took a bath in the wash tub in the kitchen only on Saturday night; when women wore Mother Hubbards and when a brick covered with a carpet served as a door-stop; and when congress gaiters were the most stylish shoes. This isn't a sign that you are getting old. It's a sure sign of a good memory.—Mitchell Advocate.
