The Chesley Enterprise is laboring under a delusion when it quotes chap 23, sec. 11 of the Assessment Act as proof that married women may vote under certain conditions. This is a revised section under R. S. O. 1897, and is only intended to give the husband a vote on property assessed to the wife. We think if our esteemed Bro. Enterprise man will look a little further into the matter he will have occasion to disabuse the minds of both the Chesley assessor and the ladies whose hopes he has so unwarrantably raised, and at the same time prevent complications in the voters list.

A country jay came to town one morning lately and being doubtles cold and hungry was impelled to break in somewhere for shelter. He unfortunately chose the gaol and although he succeeded in effecting an entrance he was detained when morning came. When Turnkey W. Wright entered the gaol in the morning he found the jay perched on the window inside the front door and soon succeeded in capturing him. The fellow is now confined in a canary cage and although he finds confinement irksome, eats heartily and is doing well. The blue jay, for such he is, had evidently got in through one of the upstairs windows, which was open a little from the top. As it is seldom these birds leave the woods it is somewhat remarkable that this one should have gone so far afield and imprisoned himself in this manner. —O. S Advertiser.
