THE OTHER MAN

Perhaps he sometimes slipped a bit,
—Well, so have you;
Perhaps some things he sought to quit—Well, so have you.
Perhaps he may have faltered—
Why, all men do, and so have I,
You must admit, unless you lie,
That so have you.
Perhaps if we would stop and think,
Both I and you,
When painting some one black as ink
—As some folks do.
Perhaps if we would recollect,
Perfection we would not expect
But just a man half-way correct,
Like me and you.
I'm just a man who's fairly good,
I'm just like you;
I've done some things I never should
Perhaps line you.
But thank the Lord I've sense to see
The rest of men with charity;
They're good enough if good as me
Say, men like you.

TETANUS OR LOCKJAW

A break in the skin is always dangerous because with the breaking of the skin, is removed the barrier of which, when it is intact, keeps out the germs which cause infection. There is a popular idea that the scratch made by a rusty nail is particularly dangerous. It is true that the rusty nail may be more dangerous than a clean nail but if so, it is not because of the rust which is harmless in itself, but because the nail has been lying around and so has had a good chance to become soiled with germs.

The fear of the rusty nail and of rusty garden tools is likely due to its having been noticed that wounds made by such articles often resulted seriously infected, and that lockjaw or tetanus sometimes resulted.

The germ which causes tetanus is found normally in the intestines of many animals. So it comes that the germ is present in the earth which is open to contamination with the discharges from these animals. The germ of tetanus is unusual in that, unlike other disease germs, it is capable of living for a long time outside of the human or animal body. It is able to do this because it can form spores, that is it can pass into a resting stage during which it is able to resist the conditions which ordinarily destroy germs.

The tetanus germ is usuallly introduced into the body through an injury made by an object which punctures or tears the tissues in such a way that the wound is not freely open to the air. The punctured wound is dangerous because of the difficulty experienced in cleaning out such a wound. Wounds of this type favor the development of tetanus, because the germ which causes this disease does not require air in order to grow.

A wound in any part of the body should be treated promptly and properly. The most important point to be thought of in caring for such a wound is to cleanse it thoroughly with soap and water, and then cover the wound with a sterile dressing in order to prevent the entrance of dirt.

Any punctured wound, no matter how made, or any wound in which dirt is driven under the skin should be brought under medical treatment without delay.

By using tetanus antitoxin where there is any possibility of infection of the wound with the germs of tetanus, the disease can be prevented. This is, in itself, a sufficient reason for securing prompt medical treatment for wounds which have had any chance at all of being contaminated with soil, dust or street sweepings. The tetanus antitoxin can prevent the disease, but in order that it may do so, it must be used before the disease in order that it may be so, it must be develops.

Osprey Fair List Out

The prize lists for Feversham fall fair are being issued this week by Secretary Geo. W. Ross of Maxwell. This year the fair is being held on Thursday and Friday, October 1 and 2. There has been a wonderful list of special prizes gathered by the Directors that is a credit to the Society—a number of specials in every class, the horse and cattle sections predominating. Write secretary Ross now for a prize list of the Osprey township fall fair and plan to enter your list of exhibits.

Liquor Sales Off

The liquor sales in Ontario for the year ending October 31, are expected to drop from 52 millions in 1930 to 40 millions this year. Even 40 millions is a vast sum to pay for intoxicants in a province of 3 million people in these days of financial depression when so many families are out of work. The Liquor Control Board is to be commended for refusing to issue permits to those engaged in construction work on the transtontinental highway. Wouldn't it be a still better move to close all liquor stores and beer warehouses in these days of financial stress just as the sale of booze was prohibited in this province from 1916 till the close of the war. It is generally admitted the liquor traffic was on humanity.—Wiarton Echo.

Dundalk's tax rate for 1931 will be 44 mills on the dollar. The rate is an advance of two mills over the 1930 rate.
