On The Main Street

One of the best known residents of Lindsay several years ago was a very genial and extremely friendly man, Jim Mitchell, who resided on Queen Street. He ran a delivery service and was everybody's friend. He was popular with school boys and girls for he allowed them to catch on the back of his horse drawn sleigh and took delight in trotting his horse—through deep pitch holes of snow on the streets of Lindsay.

The memory of Jim Mitchell was recalled one day recently when the grass on the back lawn of the Mitchell home on Queen Street was being mowed. The mower ran over a Lindsay Carter's license plate. It is brass, small in size and it bears the numbers 19-1929. The license was tacked to the bridle in years gone by.

Today the plate is in the category of an antique collector's item. The plate is now in possession of Miss Florence Mitchell, at the Queen Street home.

Quitters

One of the oddities of this world is that often the quitter gets laughed at by the person who hasn't the nerve himself to begin. (Gordon)
