either possible or desirable to transplant the Russian system entire into Canada. But the Soviets had certainly found something that was working, and Mr. Speakman saw no reason why we should not take ideas from that source as well as any other. He protested against the belief that "if we only endure long enough, if we only tighten our belts a little tighter, if we only economize a little more or eat or drink or use a little less, in some mysterious, miraculous way things will right themselves." Things don't; intelligence is the only way of righting them.

Mr. Stevens still protested that he could not find one practical suggestion in the resolution. Planned economy in an individualistic country like Canada would not work; human selfishness would prevent any such course being taken. Mr. Stevens does not take account of the fact that it was precisely human selfishness which brought affairs to a head in Russia and which ushered in the new regime and its planned economy. And then, having mentioned some additional stumbling blocks, Mr. Stevens stated that the government would take the resolution into consideration.

Mr. Lucas seconded the resolution, saying that paradoxically enough, the one bright spot he saw was the depression itself. Its magnitude might force a solution, saying that the way to avoid future depressions was to plan our economic life now in such a way as to make impossible the recurrence of the present chaos. He gave many illustrations of the wastefulness of the present capitalist system of Russia Mr. Woodsworth dealt at some length with the new economic system of Russia, as being the only existing example of a state with the planned economy. Here, in Canada we already have plenty of capital equipment for our present needs; Russia had to create that before she could hope for a measure of success. But she came through her many difficulties and now she is beginning to get results. We would do well to watch her methods. Mr. Speakman's resolution was accepted by the government.

Another issue of importance was raised by Mr. Donnelly, Liberal member from Saskatchewan. He claimed that, due to the raising of the tariff, the price of gasoline in Canada had become much higher than in the United States. In his present financial straits the farmer cannot afford the increased price. Mr. Neill said that the same thing was true of the west coast fishermen. The matter was referred to the committee on banking and commerce.

An event of interest was the maiden speech of Mr. Humphrey Mitchell, Labor victor in Hamilton. He brought up the question of election funds with special reference to the Beauharnois scandal. Observing that both Liberal and Conservative parties were implicated in that affair, he pressed for an investigation into the whole matter. Mr. King and Mr. Bennett indulged for a few moments in mutual recriminations. And Mr. Bennett again showed himself a master in the gentle art of stalling for time. Mr. Cahan, Secretary of State revealed the rather interesting information that he had been greatly hampered in his own election in Montreal by both civic and provincial police. Finally the House decided that the matter should be investigated by a committee during the present session.

A Spectacular Blaze

Shortly after 6 o'clock on Monday morning the section of Dundalk in which the Hydro sub-station is situated was illuminated with a beautiful green light, caused by a short circuit on the high tension wires between Dundalk and Corbetton. In the high wind one of the high tension wires strung lower down on the poles. This caused the power to shoot back into the local sub-station by means of the telephone wires, and the "juice" was racing outside the sub-station, causing a wonderful illumination and spluttering with a great noise like steam escaping. Numerous residents thought there was a fire on seeing the reflection shine in their windows Chas. Murcar, local hydro lineman pulled the switch outside the substation and relieved the trouble There was little harm done and hydro linemen repaired the break in the high tension line with the customary promptness.—Dundalk Herald.

An Attractive Home

"Oh, what an opportunity if I only had the time!" This is the remark of a lady visitor at the Ontario Agricultural College recently. She had come to the College to make enquiry about certain perennials which she wished to plant in the yard of her farm home, and was told about the short course of instruction in landscape gardening to be given at the College from Feb. 15th to 19th. On looking over the program of this short course she saw that there were to be instructions and demonstrations in garden planning and the selection of the most suitable kinds of trees, shrubs and flowers, and she longed to take the course.

The opportunity is there for her and many others, and no better way could be found for farm women, or men either for that matter, to spend a happy, interesting week in the middle of winter in studying and making plans for the beautification of their farm homes so that their lives might be more enjoyable in the years to come.

All persons interested in this course should understand that there is no charge for instruction and that a program of the course may be had for the asking.

The holder of nineteen mortgages of farms near Listowel has sent each owner, as a gift, a receipt for the interest due. He is in the fortunate position of being able to get along without the money, but there are few who would be so generous.

AMERICA AND JAPAN

A British General has said that only the death of one American sailor at the hands of a Japanese sailor, soldier or airman," is necessary to cause a great war in the East. Perhaps. The statement reminds the writer of a somewhat different feeling in the American army when he shouldered a gun for Uncle Sam. It was in the Philippine Islands, and it was the general opinion among the enlisted men that the Army Department at Washington throught more of the mules than the men. "Take care of those mules," was the cry. "We can get lots of soldiers, but a mule down here is worth $700." — Durham Chronicle.
