A BANKRUPT RAILWAY

It was stated in Parliament last week that the Canadian National Railway is bankrupt and that the country is paying $1,250,000 weekly to keep the lines functioning! This will be an eye opener to the people of Canada who pay this enormous deficit. A few years ago Sir Henry Thornton was given the job of managing the Canadian National Railway at a salary, which it is said, approximates $150,000 per annum. He was said to be a financial wizard who would earn his enormous salary by pulling our national railway out of the financial hole in which it was then wallowing. The hopes of the generous men who engaged Sir Henry do not appear to have materialized; in fact the railway system has evidently got in deeper and deeper under his management.

The speaker who gave us the above information, F. H. Pickell, Conservative of Brome, Quebec, advocated the sale of the system to the C. P. R. Even were that undertaken, it is doubtful if the C. P. R. or any body of men could be found who would purchase a concern which is costing the people of Canada a million and a quarter dollars every week to keep it in operation. Enormous salaries so lavishly handed out are, we believe the chief contributing agency in destroying the efficiency of our nationally owned railway.

The complaint to-day is that wealth is being concentrated in the hands of a few, while the poor are becoming poorer. Our governments are contributing directly to this sort of thing by taxing to death the poor man's living, while paying high rates of interest to financial concerns and handing out yearly salaries equivalent to a sum which could only be saved by one person in ten thousand during a lifetime. No one government appears to be alone in this respect, but all appear to find it so easy to force the poor man to pay, that they seem to decide that it is unnecessary to even think of other methods of makig the budget balance.

ROBBING PETER TO PAY PAUL

The Dominion Government has for a long time been endeavoring to persuade the people of Canada to eat more fish, and even prints a monthly bulletin with that end in view. It also has engaged a professional lady speaker to broadcast this propaganda by radio. She is now busily engaged in Toronto doing her broadcasting and giving cooking demonstrations. Surely the Dominion Government could not have taken into consideration the fact that every meal which it switches from meat to fish hits the farming community quite as much as it benefits the fisherman. Surely the farmer is hit hard enough at the present time without having any more of his principle source of revenue taken from him and handed to the fisherman. The government should withdraw its fish propoganda and quit robbing Peter to pay Paul. If the fishermen wish to advertise their wares let them do so, but not at the expense of the farmers, who help to pay the salaries of those who are bent upon still further adding to the burden of low prices and small demand.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If many more yarns from New Jersey are fired at us we will all begin to wonder if there really was a Lindbergh baby. New Jersey is really noted for its big mosquitoes and big kidnapping stories.

* * *

We note that there will be a full enquiry into certain affairs of the Ontario Hydro Commission. It is doubtful if the enquiry will have much effect or bring out any new evidence. While the Aird payments which caused the excitement, are considerable, we believe the investigation could well be carried further and delve into salaries paid, travelling - expenses and such other items as would be necessary. This investigation of hydro affairs will probably turn out similarly to that of the Drury investigation of the same Commission.

MINERALS TO EAT

Minerals are important as they are required to regulate the activities of the body, and to furnish materials for building body tissues.

The minerals in the diet have been likened to the oil which is used in machinery, as they act as lubricators and promote the smooth running of the various bodily processes. It is, for example, from the minerals that the digestive juices and other secretions obtain the acidity or the alkalinity necessary for their functioning.

We know that we should eat a balanced diet, one which provides the body with a sufficiency of its various food requirements. The body itself must maintain a chemical balance. The blood must be kept alkaline in order that it may deal with the acids which are produced as a result of tissue activity.

In order to determine whether a food is acid—or alkali forming, it is burned and the ash is tested. To keep the body in a state of health and to maintain the alkalinity of the blood, a reasonable balance between the two must be obtained. Milk, and fruits and vegetables, with a few exceptions such as prunes and rhubarb, are alkali-forming foods; meats, eggs and cereals are acid-forming foods.

Calcium is required for the building of strong teeth and bones, to keep the blood normal, and to regulate body functions. Expectant and nursing mothers and young children require an abundant supply of lime, and this is to be found in milk, cheese, leafy vegetables, carrots, turnips, oranges and whole-grain cereals.

Iron forms a necessary part of the blood as it is the carrier of oxygen. It makes the energy in the foods available for use by the body. Iron is present in eggs, lean beef, liver, leafy vegetables, molasses, dried beans potatoes, dried fruits and whole-grain cereals.

It is obvious that an adequate supply of calcium, phosphorus and iron will be obtained by the person who uses a variety of foods, making sure to include in this diet milk, leafy vegetables, fruits and whole-grain cereals. This is of practical importance because the regular use of these same foods ensures also an adequate supply of vitamins.

A diet lacking in minerals means ill-health and inefficiency. If we wish to keep healthy and enjoy a larger measure of health, we should use liberal amounts of a good variety of vegetables, particularly the leafy ones, fruits, whole-grain cereals, and milk. The minerals in vegetables which are eaten cooked are preserved by cooking the vegetables in their jackets and paring them afterwards; they may be baked or steamed. If they are pared and cooked in water, the water should not be thrown away, but used as a base for soups or sauces.

New Vegetable Varieties

A few of the varieties worthy of mention that have come to the notice of the Dominion Experimental Farm at Ottawa during the past year, that should be grown are as follows.

Bean — Davis White Wax (Stringless.) This strain is quite identical to the original variety, but is stringless.

Corn — The early yellow corn Banting certainly is in demand these days as it has stepped the season up ten to fifteen days earlier than the season of Golden Bantam. This early corn possesses very good quality and is suitable for the first early sort and for the home garden. Golden Gem is another yellow variety that is of the same season and quality of Banting.

Potato — An early shallow eyed, white potato has been required for years. A potato that would take the place of Irish Cobbler. To those that are looking for this type, then the Gold Nugget will be found ideal. The seed of this variety is under certification and can be got from the growers in Western Canada.

Tomato — Earliness in tomatoes is an important factor, where seasonal conditions are not the most ideal. The Abel variety originated in the Division of Horticultural has been found to be exceedingly early and a good yielder.

Bestal is another of the originators that has been giving a good account of itself in the trials. The fruits are of the Bonny Best type and quality, but have the earliness of Alacrity.

Break, O'Day although a desirable tomato, it was not quite early enough to be in the first early harvest, but is a promising variety.

Barrie teachers have refused to sanction any cut in salary, but may make a voluntary contribution to the relief fund.

There will be five steamers in the Canadian Pacific lake service between Port McNicoll and the head of the lakes during the coming season.

The Mayor of Penetang is leading in a movement to have the citizens organize to secure a greater share of the tourist traffic.

The Royal Alexandra Hospital, Fergus, will in future be designated "The Groves Memorial Hospital," after Dr A. Groves, who recently donated it to Fergus.
