DRUG STORE SALES

In order to give information as to the legitimate business of drug stores on Sunday, this letter is released to the Ontario press by the Ontario Retail Druggists' Association and The Lord's Day Alliance of Canada to advise the public that the Lord's Day Act of Canada, under the head of "Works of Necessity and Mercy accepted" (Section 11), expressly permits "works for the relief of sickness and suffering, including the sale of drugs, medicines and surgical appliances by retail." The sale or purchase of other merchandise on Sunday is forbidden by the Act. The druggists of Ontario. acting through the Council of the Ontario Retail Druggists' Association, are desirous that the public should assist them in the observance of the law by refraining from asking for other merchandise on Sunday.

Miss Macphail Visited Detroit Last Week

The budget debate is dragging along until Tuesday. The Whips have urged that the division may come on that day. As is usual, the debate has been longer than was anticipated, but the debate on the budget provides an excellend opportunity for the members to discuss conditions in their constituency or some particular grievance that cannot be brought up at any other time.

I was given the opportunity of addressing the distinguished group of the citizens of Detroit. The Women Lawyers of that city entertained the Judges, all of whom are men except one, at dinner at the Dearborn Inn, just opposite the Ford Airport. Since it was suggested that I speak on any subject I wished, I thought it worth while to make use of the opportunity offered to discuss present economic conditions and more particularly finance and trade obstructions. They were a delightful group of people, so generous and friendly; at the head table they had placed more Britishers than Americans and the Canadian flag was given as prominent a place as there own.

During dinner I had the opportunity of visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Hallett. Mr. Hallett is the British Consul in Detroit. To my surprise I found that while Canada has a Minister Plenipotentiary in Washington, in the person of the Hon. W. D. Herridge, and Trade Commissioners scattered over the whole of the United States, much of the Canadian work falls to the lot of the British Consuls placed in the different centres. Our Trade Commissioner deals with matters of trade only and the many tangles over immigration regulations, liquor laws, etc., are for the most part, solved by the Consul. It would seem that our Trade Commissioners should be given the authority of consuls and their scope would then be enlarged to include all Canadian-American disputes localized in their particular centre.

A marked change has taken place in the mental attitude of the American people; they are beginning to realize that they cannot isolate themselves from the rest of the world as successfully as they once thought they could. They see, too, that these huge debts which Europe owes them were lines of credit established by these European countries in the United States to enable them to buy American goods. These goods were then selling at high prices and by asking them to buy back now as much as they borrowed in the days of booming prosperity, means actually that they would be paying back two and three times as much, since money now buys much more than it did in war times. They also see that the European countries concerned can only secure gold by trading goods which they have for gold, and since the gold countries (France and United States) will not exchange goods for gold, it is quite impossible for the debtor countries to pay the United States in gold and since the United States will not accept payment in goods, the debt, under the circumstances, cannot be paid. Many who, a few years ago, swore by tariffs, are doubtful about their power to bring prosperity and others have gone completely against them.

On my way back from Detroit to Ottawa I stayed over part of a day in Toronto and acted as chairman for the Maurice Hindus lecture in Massey Hall. I discharged my duties as chairman so badly, that I wasted half the night thinking about it instead of sleeping. Maurice Hindus is possibly the greatest authority on Russia on this continent. Born in a village in the great plains of Russia, Hindus came to the United States when a lad of ten. He was educated in American schools, graduated from Colgate College and afterwards took post-graduate work at Harvard. He obtained his degree of Doctor of Literature. It was natural that the great revolution of Russia should interest him tremendously; he has made twelve trips to Russia since the revolution and is now preparing to go again. He has approached his study of that great country scientifically. He told his audience that he tried not to allow personal discomfort. which he of course, had to suffer to influence in any way his view of the great experiment in social reconstruction. "If I could not get a hotel to sleep in, I slept in a barn, and if there was no barn. I slept on good mother earth. and it troubled me not at all," Mr. Hindus said.

The Russians are an undisciplined people; they dislike going to work at a certain time, stopping at a certain time; they knew almost nothing twelve years ago about machines or machinery, consequently they have mishandled many of their fine machines and have been, in many cases, unable to operate a factory after it was built and ready for operation, but year by year they are learning to do these things. They are throwing a great amount of energy and determination into the task; they are doing without a great many things. Maurice Hindus does not believe that this generation of Russians will attain a comfortable standard of living, but he does believe that their children and their children's children will. Orthodox religion is dying out, but the family, he said, was enduring and in the country divorces were few though in the cities there were many. This was the second lecture Mr. Hindus has given in Toronto this year.

It is now rumored that Parliament will adjourn within two weeks time. This is only made possible by the shelving of the Radio Commision's report and the report of the Royal commission on the railroads and transportation until the Fall session. It is thought that the 1933 session will meet for a month or two before Christmas, then carry on again after the holiday is over. I think a great deal is lost by not acting on the reports of commissions during the session in which they are brought down.

The members of the committees are "up on their toes" on the subjects they have been investigating; the House is soon made familiar with the subject by those who are experts and desirable action seems to be more likely to result. Two other Committees have been sitting steadily, the one investigating the conduct of three Senators, W. L. MacDougald, Andrew Haydon and Donat Raymond in connection with the Beauharnois scandal. This Committee has brought down a majority report in which it names these three Senators and says that their "actions were not fitting or consistent with their duties and standing as Senators of Canada." The other Committee mentioned above has been examining into some of the appointments made by the Civil Service Commission, and two of the commissioners particularly have been subjected to a gruelling examination.

Mr. G. G. Coote of McLeod, Alta., said in a speech: "If our money was on the same level of value as British money we would be getting 69c more on every £'s worth of goods sold in Britain and for some months we would have received $1 more on every £1. The pound sterling sells for $6 in Australian money and for only $4.18 here. It is clear then that Australia can sell for less on a British market and still have more in their own currency."

KILL THE STARLINGS

In some localities efforts are being made to induce all property owners to break up the nests of the starlings on their property. This is the only thing which will control this disaster that has come, for the Starlings if left to themselves soon drive out our insectivorous and song birds. Thus we would have our useful birds displaced by this valueless and destructive imported species. In England for many years there was what was known as the "Starling shoot." Something of the kind should be instituted here.

Vital statistics for the county of Peel, show that in 1931 the population numbered 20,098, and that there were 245 births, 193 deaths and 106 marriages.
