Grand Valley harbors within its borders an interesting person in Berco Flman, a Russian who escaped from that country few weeks ago, rather than go to the front in the far east. He had received notice of being drafted for service, to report in two weeks, but instead went into hiding in a neighboring village for that length of time until his wife and friends provided him with sufficient funds with which to reach Canada. He crossed over to Hamburg, Germany, sailing from there to London, thence to Quebec and on to Toronto, where Hyman Soltz, a compatriot, met him three weeks ago. Flman is a blacksmith by trade, having run a smithy employing two or three hands, but found it difficult to make even a living there, on account of the excessive taxation. He paid his men either from $35 to $60 a year and board or about $100 a year without board. Here he is amazed at the prospect of wealth to be gathered in, a month's earnings for a good mechanic equalling a year in Russia. Then the appearance of the average farm is a revelation of riches undreamed of, the area of land, cattle and horses, etc., making the owners all appear as millionaires to him. Wonderfully pleasing as all this may be to him, the freedom and liberty exercised by all strikes him most forcibly, and pleases him best. He says Russia is in no worse state than the direst reports indicate. The rich men have been bled of their money, and cannot give employment to the laboring class, who are suffering, while the immense drafts of men to the front has paralyzed all classes of trade. He thinks Japan was far too easy in making peace terms, and that Russia was not humiliated sufficiently. Mr. Flman expects his wife to come out here when he has acquired the language a little better. No more Russia for him. —Grand Valley Star.

Eight Americans from Ohio and Pennsylvania were caught in the Parry Sound district hunting and fishing without licenses. They were taken before a magistrate at Parry Sound, who fined each of them $10 and costs and confiscated their boats and guns.

The Eugenia Developement

For a long time there have been skeptics who pooh-poohed the idea that the Eugenia waterpower would be developed. Of course the public has been rather kept in the dark as to the progress of affairs, but the company did not think it necessary or expedient to take the public into its confidence while the scheme was more or less in in embryo. The affair has now arrived at a stage where something more definate is allowable. The company is a private one and consists of J. P. Telford, M. P., Owen Sound, as president; Thos. McLaughlan, secretary; a Walkerton capitalist is 1st vice president; John O'Donohue, Stratford, 2nd vice president; and B. F. Reesor, Lindsay, managing director. These gentleman have the affair in their own hands and purpose developing the power themselves. There will be no stock for sale. During three days of last week Mr. Von Schon, who was chief engineer of the great Soo power works, was at Eugenia taking some data for the information of the owners, and as soon as his report is received the work will go ahead. The amount of power to be produced has not yet been fully proven but it will be over 2000 horsepower. It will require a year or more to get the power on the market.

Negotiations are now under way for taking over Mr. Deagle's lease and plant, but these have not yet been concluded.

A warning has been sent out to local constables throughout the province by Mr. H. B. Cowan, Provincial Superintendent of Agricultural societies, stating that any local constable who accepts a bribe from people who operate gambling outfits and games of chance at fall exhibitions, and in return permits them to operate on the fair grounds, is liable, on conviction of such action, to be sent to jail for fourteen years. Detectives who have been sent out by the Department of Agriculture, have found that many of the local constables work in with these sharpers. It has sometimes happened that when the detectives have asked for for assistance from the local constables in arresting the offenders, the constables have warned them and enabled them to escape. An effort will be made this year to detect constables at this work, and where convictions can be secured the offenders will be prosecuted with the utmost vigor.
