MUST NOT SHOOT DOG

An interesting case was heard before Judge Wismer at the Orillia Division Court, when Michael Mahoney, Oro Township, brought civil action against a neighbor, Alexander MacDougall, to collect $50 as the value of a dog, which Mahoney said he owned, and which, he testified, had been destroyed by MacDougall. "You cannot shoot a dog because it is a nuisance," said Judge Wismer. "If that were the law, I might be shooting dogs around my place all the time." Subsequently judgment of $25 and costs was awarded to Mahoney, the plaintiff.

It Can't Be Done

We can tell the farmer to a decimal point how many acres of sod or stubble a man should plow in a ten-hour day with a team of horses or with a tractor. We can inform him that he should be able to grow potatoes for 30 cents per bushel; likewise that the average length of life of a corn binder is 20.6 years, and that a gang plow should live to the fine old age of 19.3 years. Yes, sir, we can fairly spout statistics and figures which would amaze the man on the farm. But honestly, brother, when you ask how to make money selling milk to the factory at something under two cents per quart, and when you yearn for enlightenment on how to wax fat on selling pigs with their boots on at $4.24 per hundred, we must follow our usual policy of being very frank, and our answer is that we have a sneaking suspicion that you can't do it.—Exchange.

NEW WAY TO OUST TENANTS

A new wrinkle to get rid of unwelcome tenants was revealed in Kitchener last week when the provincial police discovered a house with all the doors taken off, the job having been done by a cold-hearted landlord, who utilized a large screwdriver.

The tenants claimed the lease did not expire until the following Saturday, but the landlord wanted them out sooner and took this novel way of accomplishing it. The tenants appealed to the police, and the latter, in marked contrast to the attitude of the landlord, did not prosecute, but simply ordered him to put the doors back on. He objected at first, but when he saw the police meant business, he went to work with the long screwdriver that had caused cold blasts to sweep through the house, endangering the health of two small children and eliminating the family's privacy. The tenants looked on and enjoyed the landlord's second session of labor.
