Industrial Home Notes

(By an Inmate)

We were glad to note the success of the Flesherton show fair, financially and congratulate some of our old friends on the number of prizes captured by them. The weather was all that could be desired and the directors ought to make the weather man an honorary member in consideration of the ideal weather with which they have been favored during the last few years.

Markdale fair on Tuesday and Wednesday last was also blessed with beautiful weather and was, we believe, attended by a large crowd, even the inmates of the home who were able and so desired were kindly permitted to go in the afternoon, not however without being kindly cautioned by the manager against abusing the privilege. Many of them availed themselves of the outing, but we think very few of them were financially able to enter the grounds, there being no fund in connection with the institution, as far as we know, to provide for that privilege. Your cor. being physically unable to take care of himself in a crowd, very wisely remained at home and contented himself by watching from the verandah the passers by on their way to the grounds. The produce of the industrial farm captured 15 first and second prizes Perhaps some of the competitors may feel inclined to murmur at this seeing that it is a county institution and provided and maintained at the expense of the rate-payer, be that as it may, it is nevertheless a tangible proof that the manager is putting forth every effort to make the concern as profitable as he can and by doing so helps to lighten the burden of the taxpayers. Instead of going about in Sunday clothes and putting on consequential airs as we are informed that some managers do, he fills the place of a good man out of doors as well as in his office, and may be seen at all times in the working season, digging delving and watering his fine garden and everything within reach of the hose, and at a time hours after other people have quit their day's labor. In the working season he would by strangers, be ten times more likely to be mistaken for an industrious and faithful hired laborer, than the manager of the home, and we would naturally suppose that the more prizes he can capture at the several shows through his assiduous industry and interest in the public good, so much the more should his service be appreciated by public sentiment.

The potatoes are being raised at present and weather permitting, will probably be finished before these items appear in print. On account of the continued dry weather and not being within reach of the hose the turn-out will probably be below that of former years and a much larger number of small tubers; still, the crop is as good as the general run throughout the country, and likely more than enough for home consumption. Cabbage are plentiful and very large. Mangolds and sugar beets are splendid and many of mammoth dimensions among them, in fact, everything in the garden line is exceptionally good.

Among the visitors to the home on Thursday last were Mrs P. Holman, of Flesherton, and her grand daughter, Miss Laura Holman, of Port Law. We were very glad to see Mrs. Holman enjoying so large a degree of good health.

Commencing the first of the present month your cor will contiue in future to pay for his keep at the home, at least so far as his pension goes, which will be, he thinks, within a few cents each month of the amount required from pay inmates.

Priceville

We had excellent weather for our agricultural show on the 4th and 5th. There was a fine display of roots, fruit and vegetables placed in the hall on the 4th. The grain was not quite so well represented. The ladies had a good display of fancy and useful articles in the dry goods line, and the bread, butter and pastry was excellent. There was a large amount of live stock shown and of good quality. The gate receipts were good and the concert hall was crowded at night. Commissioner McArthur in a neat little speech introduced H. H. Miller, M.P., for South Grey, who made a pleasing address and declared the fair open. Mr. Miller also made an ideal chairman at the concert at night.
