The deceased lady was well up in years.

Mr. Geo. Stewart met with a nasty accident on Tuesday while shipping stock from this station which might easily have proved fatal, but fortunately did not prove serious, only prevented George from accompanying his consignment of stock to the city this week. A frozen car door was primarily to blame and an axe which was brought into play to loosen the door did the deed by slipping and the head struck Mr. Stewart on top of his "central," slightly demoralizing the system for the time being. A heavy cap was cut through, a nasty scalp wound resulted and the escape from death was narrow, still we are glad to know the accident is not likely to confine Mr. Stewart to the house for any length of time.

The animals were unable to free themselves and both were drowned The loss to Mr. Dunlop is in the neighborhood of $350.
