EDITORIAL DRIFT

The worll is certainly moving towards aerial navigation. The Scientific American last week advertised an air motor. There must be a demand for such a machine or it would not be put on the market. That the flying machine as a mode of conveyance is not far away derives it's strongest probability from the fact that the governments of various countries are preparing for it's advent and discussing it's probable influence on future wars. If it makes wars impossible or too horrible for humanity to countenance it will be the crowning blessing of the ages.

That was a great delegation of temperance people which waited upon Premier Whitney on Friday last. The gathering was 1000 strong and it overflowed the assembly hall at the parliament buildings. The delegation thanked Mr. Whitney for the manner in which he had enforced the law during the past year and only made one request, to repeal the three fifths clause of the Temperance Act. It cannot be said that they received much consolation along this line. Mr. Whitney told them plainly that he would make no hasty changes in the Act until it had been thoroughly tested. He had been busy enforcing the past year. If later on they thought the percentage should be lowered it would be done. It now rests with the temperance people themselves, to make Mr Whitney see that it is in the welfare of his government to place everybody on an [illegible] footing and to see that the laws [illegible] forced as well. It is the duty [illegible] government to enforce its own [illegible] great [illegible] all you [illegible] realizes this truth in the [illegible] bad." [illegible] of excise laws, but, too [illegible] "All [illegible] it comes down to acts [illegible] in a rap[illegible] [illegible]al questions the enforcement of these are left to individual effort. In the enforcement of the liquor laws the Whitney government has only been doing it's duty—better, it is true, than that duty has ever been performed before—still there is a danger in the pharisaical attitude which should be avoided. The people can be trusted to give honor where honor is due. We confidently hope that later on Mr. Whitney will see his way clear to grant the prayer of the delegation which waited upon him last week, and we look to our representative here, Mr. Lucas, to assist (which he can materially) in causing the light of wisdom to shine into the hearts of Mr. Whitney's cabinet.

Grand Valley Presbyterians have increased the salary of their pastor, Rev. Mr. McClintock, $150, making it $1000.

Thos. Gowan, editor of the Thornbury Herald, and who is also a member of the school board of that town, has been engaged as principal of the Clarksburg school. The sections join.

Mr. Joseph Dudgeon last week sold his team of four year old draught mares to Mr. Brecken of Burlington for the handsome sum of $650. Mr. Dudgeon has more of the same class, but younger, growing into similar value.—Chatsworth News.

Fines amounting to $1,150 have been collected as a result of prosecutions for violation of the liquor law in Cobalt town. Twenty-two "blind pigs" were raided by Officer Morrison under the instruction of the Provincial License Department, and liquor of all kinds was confiscated. The law at present provides that no license may be issued within six miles of a mining camp and it is found difficult to enforce. As much as $10,000 has been offered for a yearly license in Cobalt Ont. The Department has so far declined to grant any.

A letter dated at Scotia Junction on Feb. 24th has been received giving an account of the tragic death of Robert Ogleston, which occurred last week. Ogleston, accompanied by a friend, John Smith, was going into camp about eight miles from Canoe Lake Station, and the former stayed behind the rest. As he had not arrived in about two hours his companion returned to search for him After walking two miles he found a place where wolves had crossed the trail, and looking around, he discovered Ogleston's boat, pieces of his clothes and his hat. The fate of the unfortunate man was only too evident; he had been devoured by the wolves. Deceased was not well known in the district, and his companions did not know where to locate his friends.

Charles F. Raymond, in Raymond's Record, Oakville: They tell me that you are thinking of leaving the farm this spring. Don't do it; keep close to the soil. You are tired of feeding the cattle, the sheep and the pigs, tired of chopping the wood, tired of cleaning the stable, tired of the store on the corner—tired of it all. You have visited the city, and its roar fascinates you. Everyone seemed well dressed and happy, and the laughter and conversation of the passers-by were music to your ear. Stay with the farm, for it is a healthy spot to live on, where you get a complexion from nature's brush and an arm made strong in God's gymnasium, where you neeb no medicine to make you eat. Stay with the farm, where life is natural and friendships more real, where you can wear what you want, when you want and there is none who will criticize. Stay with the farm, with its spirit of trust and friendliness, from the collie who follows you up and down the line to the swallow who builds in the barn.

Peter Roantree of Merriton developed a severe attack of delirium tremens, and was taken to the station, later being sent to the county jail in custody of P. C. Arnott. When half of the journey had been accomplished Roantree refused to proceed. The constable drew his baton, but the prisoner, overpowered him, took it away and proceeded to administer punishment with such force that the stout weapon was broken on the constable's head, rendering him almost unconscious. The prisoner was handcuffed to the officer and could not escape. In the meantime help arrived and and a cab was secured, and in company with three other constables, Roantree proceeded to jail, but broke all the windows in the cab on the journey and gave endless trouble to three strong officers.

The Registrar-General has issued new forms of burial permit. An undertaker, clergyman, sexton, householder or other person engaging in the removal or burial of the dead before the permit has been issued incurs a penalty of $20 and costs on conviction. Persons dying of small-pox, scarlet fever, diptheria or cholera must be buried forthwith by privale burial, and transportation of the corpse is forbidden. An effort will be made by the department to prosecute all offenders, as there has been some laxity in the undertakers and others in their observance of the law. It is unlawful and inconvenient for relatives of the deceased to leave the obtaining of the permit to the undertaker, and the practice should be discouraged.
