Industrial Home Notes

(By an Inmate)

We omitted to mention in our last items that Robert Askin, an old and well known resident of Markdale, had been admitted for a few months to the home. A very sore leg, the result of a bad break and an improper resetting, were the occasion of his coming here for the winter, Robert is a very quiet, inoffensive person, never meddles, argues or quarrels with anyone, and by no means, as far as we have seen, an undesirable companion. He hopes to be able to leave on the arrival of the warm weather.

Most of the building material for annex to barn is now on the ground and the work of framing will likely soon begin.

Peter Parker, an old man from Proton, with a terribly sore leg, probably incurable, was brought in the beginning of last week for admittance. Dr. Ego examined him and very promptly pronounced him an unfit subject for the house of refuge. After considerable phoning back and forth it was decided to send him to the hospital at Owen Sound for treatment. He was accordingly forwarded to that institution by the night train.

Miss Dunnington of the staff and niece of the matron, severed her connection with the institution on Tuesday last. We were rather surprised that Miss D. should desire to leave her estimable aunt, but perhaps she anticipates forming a closer relationshsp in another direction in the near future. We also noticed that Miss S., an ex-member of the staff, had taken a different view of life by embarking into one of the united states. Well, such things will be, and we wish her a long, happy, smooth and prosperous journey through life.

We regret to have to state that on Thursday last the matron was put to the painful necessity of placing one of the female inmates, a recent comer, in solitary confinement for highly insubordinate conduct and using foul and abusive language. By tea time, however, the offender had discovered that prudence was the better part of valor and was released on the promise of future better behavior, and we trust the lesson taught will be impressive, showing her that order, decency and obedience are the lines upon which the discipline of this institution is to be maintained.

On Tuesday last Mr Harness was suddenly and unexpectedly called upon to attend the funeral of his cousin, Mr. Frank Taylor of Regina. Mr. Taylor was a young, energetic and prosperous man and a christian. About three years ago he got married, went west and established himself in a lucrative business at Regina. A few weeks ago he, with his wife, returned home on a business and pleasure trip combined. He had made considerable purchases in connection with his business and intended returning a few days ago, but was taken suddenly ill. A physician was called in, who told him that if he had any worldly arrangements to make to do so without delay, as his time on earth was short. He did so. In the meantime other physicians were summoned in consultation and the only hope of his recovery was an immediate operation for apendicitis, to which he readily consented. The disease had, however, passed the skill of the physician, and he died within three hours after the operation. Mr. Harness returned Saturday evening.

Owing to the muddy state of the roads our divine service yesterday was not largely attended. The Sunday previous the service room was packed to its utmost capacity. Your cor. was able to attend yesterday for the first time in four or five weeks.

An Osprey Ratepayer Indignant.

To the Editor of the Advance:—

Dear Sir—Is it possible that a public man could outlive his usefulness or is it possible he could serve the public for almost a quarter of a century and never display his selfishness or narrow mindedness, but such would seem to be the case. Now it happened that a part of our township is over three miles from a school and has been so for over 40 years, and the children have had to beg a schooling from Artemesia all that time or go without, which one generation has had to do, while we educated this man's children who now hold high positions through their education, which we paid for, while we beg our own or do without. Now we have another generation coming on and those beggars asked the Osprey council at its last meeting to appoint an arbitrator to form a union school with Artemesia. But did they do it? No, they had the gall to say that Artemesia was the dog and Osprey was the tail and the tail could not wag the dog. Who would expect such an expression from a member of the county council whom we have placed at the head of all our public affairs and when he reached the top of the ladder find him so narrow that he moved to lay over the petition to see if Artemesia would make a section and take this other generation in and educate them, for then it would seem to me that the whole council is afraid to do its duty. The section we are in has something like a hundred and ten or sixteen thousand assessment and we ask about thirty thousand, leaving those large minded people eighty thousand or over and then I think if they were assessed as high as we are accordingly they probably would still have one hundred thousand left, but they have a good section left as it is and surely we poor mortals should receive fair play. We are not afraid of arbitration but those whole souled people seem to be.—OSPREY RATEPAYER.
