HEALTH

by Frederick Tennyson M.D.

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

PERIODIC HEALTH EXAMINATIONS

Those who first suggest a new procedure are apt to find their suggestion either ignored or ridiculed. This was what happened when, back in 1861, Dr. Horace Dobell expressed the idea of a periodic examination, and no one apparently paid any attention to his proposal. Nevertheless, the seed which he sowed did not die and in later years it took root and today is bearing some fruit.

The periodic health examination of the apparently well person has certain objectives. These objectives are based upon an understanding of existing conditions. Many people are living at a low standard of fitness because their bodies are not functioning properly; many others are harboring unsuspected disease which may be and likely is undermining their health; still others fail to enjoy the full measure of physical and mental health which might be theirs if they lived a hygienic life. In other words, effectiveness, happiness and even life itself are endangered through the individual's ignorance of his own body conditions and needs.

Ignorance is banished through the periodic health examinations which reveals any abnormal functioning, unsuspected disease, and undesirable habits of life of the individual. The examination is, first of all, revealing, and, having disclosed the truth, it allows for faults to be corrected, disease treated, and a hygienic life planneod in accordance with individual needs.

This form of health supervision must be on an individual basis, because, as individuals,we differ from each other; our heredity is different, our environment has been different, and our needs are different. We can say that everyone should use pasteurized milk, because it is the only safe milk, as part of a balanced diet. We can add that all require rest, exercise, fresh air and sunshine. But we do not all need, nor would we all profit by exactly the same routine of life.

There are those who criticize the periodic health examination on the grounds that it focusses an unhealthy interest on the body. It is difficult to believe that blissful ignorance is to be preferred to a proper understanding. Ignorance leads to much more that is undesirable that does understanding. The periodic health examination, followed by helpful advice and a clear explanation, will banish many fears which now make life miserable and uncertain.

How The Livestock Producer Loses

In the latest issue, the Live Stock and Meat Trade Review again returns to the attack on the uneconomical habit of overloading the livestock markets on Mondays. "Unfortunately," says the Review, "the foolish practice of offering the bulk of the week's supply on the Monday market was again very strongly in evidence, with a more or less disastrous effect upon prices paid, and certainly increasing the cost of marketing to the producer, through daily hold-overs. During the hot months, buyers' needs in big meats are mostly quite moderate and often the result is that out of a big Monday run they will pick required qualities here and there, and the bulk has to be sold as best it may. A large percentage of the poorer end of the stock has small commercial value, and in recent months a considerable volume of thin cattle of good type and conformation, very suitable for feeding, has gone to slaughter because of the lack of country demand."

BETTER THAN FARMING

An Oakland County farmer was trucking a load of live stock to the market and had a blowout just as he was passing the State Insane Asylum grounds. As he repaired the tire two inmates watched him from the other side of the road fence. "Are you a farmer?" one called to him.

The farmer replied that he was without looking up from his work.

"Have you ever been crazy?" asked the second inmate.

At that the farmer turned around to face his questioner. "Not that I know of," said he.

"Well," and the second inmate nudged the first, "You better try it 'cause it's a sight easier than farmin'."

Middle school examinations would be through by the end of June, he announced, and with the exception of language paper, upper school tests would be concluded about the same time. Results of the examinations would be available relatively early in August.
