Saw Seven Deer

Seven deer were seen on the west mountain near Kimberley one day last week by two Kimberley hunters when they were out after partridge. They also alarmed a fox that was resting close by. After seeing the fox they walked a short distance and surprised the seven deer as they were resting in a hollow of the ground. They leaped to their feet and cantered a short distance into the hardwood bush and then stopped to see what had alarmed them. They remained for a few moments and then wheeled and were out of sight. If the hunters had been inclined they could easily have shot one or two of them. At the same time as they sighted the deer several partridges also made their appearance, but they refrained from shooting them in their eagerness of watching the deer.

PLANTING OF EVERGREEHS

The nurserymen's slogan, "It is not a home until it is planted," is very true; and the farmhouse which has to stand on its own merits, and is often set among unsightly outbuildings would seem to be more in need of background and foundation planting than the town or city house which, in many cases, gains in value and appearance from the plantings on neighboring grounds. Evergreens are being extensively used for foundation planting now and where circumstances permit are unquestionably the most satisfactory. Once established, evergreens require a minimum of attention and are attractive at all seasons.

Dwarf Mountain Pine, Japanese Yew, and certain varieties of juniper and cedar are most suitable for foundation planting; and, while the cost is greater than for many other shrubs, they are worth the difference.

After planning on the shrubs to be planted, the work can be accomplished over a period of years. In this way the outlay at any one time need not be unreasonably high. Watering can also be better attended to when only a few are planted at a time, because evergreens must not be allowed to dry out during the first year.
