

How many readers remember: When a gentleman named Lamb opened Lindsay's first silent motion picture theatre, located several doors east of the Hotel Benson?

When there was a bandstand in Victoria Park and band concerts were held every Friday night?

When there was a fire alarm bell at the corner of Lindsay Street and Kent Street East?

When the Marks' Brothers dramas packed crowds into the theatre on the last night of the annual Lindsay Fair?

The annual appearance of Guy Brothers minstrels at the theatre?

When Wm. Thornbury was liquor inspector and how the "Boys" tipped off the bootleggers when the inspector was about to make a raid on an unlicensed bootlegger?

When two beautiful horses dashed out of the fire hall lugging the fire truck and the hook and ladder truck whenever the fire bell was heard?

When the old grammar school stood like an old castle on the grounds east of the collegiate Institute?

When the Methodist Church was at the corner of William and Wellington Streets and when it became the Skitch carriage shop?

When the skating rink was on Lindsay Street South and the YMCA was at the corner of Kent and Lindsay Streets?

When the store at William and Peel Streets was owned by Alex Fisher and Neil McFadden and Harry Stoddart were clerks in the store?

When Dr. Broad, Dr. Rice and Dr. Lawrence were active as veterinary surgeons and when the latter two vets had the first snowmobiles and they made their own vehicles?

When there was a Presbyterian Church on Francis

Street and later a public school, across from the Court House?

When butcher shops on Kent Street were owned by Adams Bros., Primeau, O'Halloran, Arksey and Calvert and Tom Arnold sold meat in the market square?

When in the days of a big depression there were long, high piles of cordwood at the market square and unfortunate men on relief had to cut this wood before they were handed a town voucher which was then handed to local grocers for baskets of food which the town treasurer paid for?

When many men chewed tobacco and there was a by-law against spitting on the sidewalks?

When Lindsay had a one man police force and that man was John Short, who single handed broke up fights and also arrested and took disturbers by the arm, many times handcuffed and walked them to the lock-up. These were the days when there were numerous bar room brawls?

When on special and regular holidays practically every storekeeper displayed flags?