EDITORIAL DRIFT

Another reason why the Whitney government was returned to power with such an overwhelming maj ority has been given us. A settler in newer Ontario, who has been a reformer from his youth up, informs The Advance that he voted Conservative this time simply because of the fair way that settlers have been treated by Mr. Whitney. Their patents have not been held back, and the length of occupation reduced so that homesteading is not so serious a matter as it was. It was a personal matter with this voter, and no doubt there were thousands like him. Fair, honorable, above-board treatment are stronger arguments than words.

Just what it is that attracts lightning to barns, while other structures are comparatively immune, has never been satisfactorily explained. This is something our scientists should get after. When the cause is known a remedy for this great loss will be sure to follow, and this country certainly needs something to protect it from the great loss annually suffered by the farming community. The Meaford Mirror chronicles the striking of six barns in the north part of this county during electric storms last week, only one, however, being totally consumed. Most of our last week's exchanges chronicle the destruction of barns and it is high time a strenuous effort was made to discover protective measures. It seems to us the matter is so serious that our governments should make a move in the line of offering a reward for the discovery of the cause. Or some of our millionaires who desire to have their names immortalized might take the hint we here let drop.

A strange coincidence was related us by Mr. M. K. Richardson recently. While in Barrie on June 18 last he stepped into a news store and picked up an English publication issued by the Harmsworths, and noted a headline, "What would we give to have seen the battle of Waterloo?" Mr. Richardson remarked to a young lady who stood near, that it was rather a peculiar incident that he should read this line, as the day was the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo. "Yes," replied the young lady, "it is peculiar, but not nearly so strange as that you should appeal to me, a great granddaughter of General Blucher." The young woman's father is an employee of the Grand Trunk in Barrie and her claim to distinction was bona fide.

The County Council has been in session all week, and will continue until tomorrow. Besides the regular routine work, of which there is about the usual amount, the good roads question is the important subject before the council. A very interesting discussion took place yesterday on the report of the committee appointed last session to consider the inauguration of a modern system of road-making. The discussion was exhaustive, and all points for and against the system, which has already been adopted by several counties, were well brought out. The good roads movement has the sanction of the Ontario Government, which offers to grant aid to counties adopting it. Grey county could do worse than fall in line; doubtless it will. A committee will be appointed to consider what roads shall be taken over for permanent improvement, and what amount shall be spent.—O. S. Sun.
