The columns of stuff that some of the Toronto dailies have been publishing about Tom Longboat's baptism and marriage is enough to make the average citizen tired of sporting heroes. There is very little to admire in this very ordinary specimen of the savage, even if he possesses enough endurance to travel 25 miles without stopping, and his private life has no interest for the general public.

Sam Duck of Grand Valley was tried before Magistrates Richardson, Tate, and McClelland, and convinced and fined for an infraction of the Act respecting the inspection and sale of food. Duck had a get-rich-quick scheme. He got quantities of ordinary butter, which he branded as creamery. He also secured a supply of wrappers so marked which he supplied to farmers' wives, and a thriving trade was done. The butter mostly found its way to Toronto, where it was confiscated, but the brander was hard to locate. The man was finally run down in Grand Valley. According to the Crown, the fraud has been going on for years. The defence was a stubborn one, but the offence was clearly proven, and a stiff fine was imposed, with costs amounting to over forty dollars.

Egremont township has again expressed itself unmistakably on the question of local option. The by-law for repeal has been defeated by the very large majority of 360. On the Rev. Messrs. King and Little and a few local helpers devolved the work of holding meetings and organizing the campaign. They, as well as all who were in sympathy with them have a right to feel supremely satisfied. Having secured more than a three-fifths majority, in fairness a three-fifths majority should now be required to repeal local option. But we fancy another attempt at repeal will not be made in a hurry.—Confederate.

When Ed. Legate, who lives north-east of town, was helping his brother butcher hogs, several days ago, the knife accidentally entered the palm of his hand, inflicting a severe injury, the tendon of the little finger being severed. Dr. Smith, who attended him, found it necessary to administer chloroform while the ends of the tendon were being brought together.—Shelburne Economist.
