EDITORIAL COMMENT

The returns of those deported from this country as undesirable citizens amply confirm the charge of lax inspection at the ports of entry. Such careless admission of undesirable immigrants has certainly cost this country a pretty penny during the past fiscal year.

The Artemesia township council has wisely invested in a stone crusher. With the machinery we now have our roads ought soon to get licked into pretty good shape. Perfection would be sooner attained, however, if the road work was commuted throughout the whole township and the money applied in a way that would produce beter results. "Penny wise and pound foolish" applies with its full force to our present system of patching and mending and spending of township money in one division because the fellows in some other division are likely to pull more money out of the taxes than they. As Commissioner Campbell says, the full benefit of our expenditure will never be derived until a permanent road overseer is appointed and the work systematically done.

Mr. Hanna's amendments to the liquor law ought to be very acceptable to the temperance people. They tend to tighten up the reins and make the law easier of enforcement. There is no change in the three-fifths clause, but Mr. Hanna says he has this "under consideration."

A Story of I. B. Lucas

(Toronto Star.)

A former resident of Grey county was up at the Legislature the other day, and and had the pleasure of seeing Mr. I. B. Lucas, M P. P., presiding over an important committee, and doing it with skill and authority.

"When we first elected Lucas," said the visitor, "I predicted that he would rise to a seat in the Cabinet, and, of course, it is only a question of time until that prophecy comes true. After the next shuffle he will probably be Hon. I. B"

Then the visitor laughed.

"Did you ever hear," he asked, "about the joke on I. B. when he was canvassing for himself in that first campaign of his? Well, it was in the winter, and he had a friend with him in a cutter. They stopped at a farm house, and Mr. Lucas went in while the friend remained outside, holding the horse. Mr. Lucas at that time, was, and is yet, very boyish-looking, but the farmer and his wife made him very welcome, listened to his talk, and promised to read the literature he gave them They followed him to the door and saw the man in the cutter.

'Say,' exclaimed the elector, 'why didn't he come in? Is that him'?

"Mr. Lucas didn't understand.

" 'Is that your father?'

" 'My father—no.'

" 'Oh,' said the farmer. 'I thought mebbe you had your father along. We generally like to have the candidate himself look in on us.'

"Then Mr. Lucas had to go back into the house again and explain that he was not canvassing for an absent father, but for himself. He had to explain that he was a great deal older than he looked, and I guess he has had to put up that old-age argument a good many times since."

It is also related that when he first attend the Legislature he tried to pass through a door sacred to "members only," he was waved away by an attendant, and told not to try a trick like that on an old stager.

Two young children of Mr. Robert Stirret of Emo were burned to death in a fire that destroyed the family dwelling.

Our Scrap Book

SMUGGLING ON LAKE HURON.

From the Barrie Advance, May 24, 1861.

We understand that Mr. Gibbard, the officer in charge of the Government fishery and revenue boat on Lakes Huron and Superior, seized last week an American smuggling schooner, with a considerable stock of dry goods, groceries and provisions on board. This vessel was trading at one of our Indian villages, and awaits the disposal of the Customs Department at Shebananing—reference having been made to Quebec for instructions. She had no papers or clearance, and was as usual in the whiskey trade, so very injurious not only to the Indians and half breeds, but also to the legitimate trade carried on by our merchants from Penetanguishene, Collingwood and Owen Sound. Mr. Gibbard had orders to start very early, and was on the North shore before the ice broke up.

DRUMMED OUT.

From the Globe, March 22, 1867.

On Wednesday the ceremony of "drumming out," seldom performed in the army at the present day, took place at the Parliament barracks. The subject of this unpleasant ceremony was a man named Andrew Duggan, a private in the 17th Regiment, and a decidedly bad character. His convictions for larceny and drunkenness have been so numerous that his comrades gladly welcomed a change that was to relieve them of the stigma likely to fall on them through his misconduct. Duggan, was about a month ago, sentenced to 50 lashes, but these proving useless as far as his reformation was concerned he received a sentence of six months' imprisonment and an ignominious discharge as punishment for his last offence. The latter part of the sentence was carried out early yesterday morning, when the prisoner's clothing was stripped off, the facings, and all evidence to denote his connection with the regiment. He was afterwards marched between a drummer and fifer through the open ranks, carrying on his breast and back the word "thief," legibly enough to make the cause of his degradation manifest. He was afterwards sent to the civil prison in charge of a guard, the smallest drummer boy in the regiment being selected to give him a farewell kick as he parted company with his regiment for ever, a disgraced villain. The hardihood of the prisoner himself was scarcely equal to the trying circumstances,—a hundred lashes being even more welcome than the disgrace with which he was publicly expelled; but the sentence was a just one, and the addition of six months' imprisonment will give him an opportunity for reflection while out of the reach to temptation, of which it is hoped he will take advantage.

From the Owen Sound Times, Friday, Oct 30, 1858.

On Friday week a man named Hugh Graham of Tara, was beating his wife, when a person named Wilson went to interfere, taking a loaded gun in his hand, which he left at the outside of the door. When Wilson interfered, Graham took up an axe and drove him out of the house, making hostile demonstrations with it. Wilson warned him to desist, threatening to shoot him if he did not; but Graham still followed him, when Wilson fired. The shot entered at one corner of his mouth, carried away his lower front teeth, a piece of his tongue, broke his jaw bone, and passed out through his other cheek. Wilson gave himself up, and is now in Goderich jail awaiting his trial. Graham is recovering from the effects of his wound.

Robert King, a retired farmer of Grand Valley, was instantly killed at his farm near Erin town line, Thursday last, where he had gone on Tuesday. His wife when informed that he had met with an accident, was stricken with paralysis and died next day. Mr. King was cutting up a fallen tree, the butt of which rested on the stump. It turned over suddenly and struck him on the back of the neck.

We understand that the Hahn House has been rented to Mr. Lochie McKenzie, who takes possession in the course of a couple of weeks. Just what plans Mr. Hahn has in view we are unable to say, but are informed he is about to enter into business in some other town and Brussels is named as the place. We will be sorry to lose Mr. Hahn but have no doubt the excellent reputation of the house will be kept up to standard by the new proprietor.—Durham Chronicle.

A case of deep interest to farmers was recently tried at Walkerton. The township of Brant passed a by-law prohibiting sheep from running at large on the highway. A farmer allowed his sheep to run the highway. A cattle drover came along and his horse was frightened, ran away and was killed. The drover sued the farmer for damages. The case was tried before a jury which awarded the full amount of damages. The farmer appealed to the Court of Appeal which sustained the verdict of the jury. According to the above decision, the farmer is liable, even if the township has by-laws prohibiting live stock to run at large.
