The Arab Horse.

An Interesting Article By H. H. Miller, M. P.

A recent issue of the Farmer's Advocate to hand contains a very interesting article on "The Arab Horse" from the pen of Mr. H. H. Miller, M. P. for South Grey, who is a devoted horseman. Mr. Miller recently sold his pure bred Arab colt to Hon. Clifford Sifton for $1000 but he informed The Post that he has purchased another Arab colt from Sir Wilfred S. Blunt of England which will be shipped in about a month. The article in question is embellished with a picture of Councillor Hahn, entitled "a rough kodak picture or Jocklan and his trainer." The article, in part, is as follows:

It is generally admitted that the Thoroughbred horse of to day owes much to the Arab, from whom most of its good qualities have been inherited, and that less directly, but just as certainly, many of the best features of the Standardbred, Hackney, Coach breeds, and others of the light horses, as well as one of the Percherons, are due to Arab blood. Many contend, however, that the Thoroughbred is to-day in many ways superior to the Arab, and that nothing can now be gained by means of the Arab cross that cannot be better obtained through the Thoroughbred.

By others who know the Arab best, this is absolutely and stoutly denied. True it is that it would be unwise to use the Arab with a hope of obtaining winners upon either the running or trotting tracks of our day. But if one desires to breed for beauty of form and action, for intelligence, and unequalled temper and disposition, sound constitution, good legs and feet, and wonderful strength and endurance, he may use the Arab, and will not be disappointed.

Those who most severely criticize the Arab horse are, for the most part, those who know least about him. I recently heard a very prominent, able and generally well-informed veterinary surgeon, in a public address, speak somewhat disparagingly of the Arab, as compared with the Thoroughbred. The gentleman afterwards admitted to me that he had little personal knowledge of the Arab, but had for some time superintended an extensive breeding and racing establishment of Thoroughbreds, and had himself owned Thoroughbred sires for service. He had thus naturally become prejudiced in favor of the Thoroughbred—a horse good enough I readily acknowledged, for any man to love and admire, and of course for some purposes superior to the Arab.

Sir Wilfred Scawen Blunt, of Sussex, England, is, I believe, the most successful breeder of Arabs in the world to-day. He established his stud in 1878, the foundation stock having been purchased by him during a journey made by his wife, Lady Anne Blunt, and himself to Aleppo Bagdad and Damascus. He had added many subsequent importations, and his name, as a breeder of Arabs, is now well and favorably known to many European governments who purchase from him, and from other sources, Arab sires for their government studs.

A breeder unacquainted with the Arab will naturally hesitate to use him as a sire, because of his small size. Blunt says, as do all other authorities, that the natural height of the Arab in his own country is from 14 hands to 14.2. Blunt adds that, though an extra inch may be fairly allowed as the increased result of good feeding among his poor descendants in England, the true type always disappears at 15 hands, and, with the type, largely the quality. He claims, however, that "The good Arabian sire of 14.2 hands, which is the natural height, will get stock from common cart mares as large and powerful as an English Thoroughbred will, though he be of 16 hands, and, as a rule, far sounder in wind and limb, and especially with better feet." In another article he says: "With 16-hand mares, the produce from an Arab sire of 14.2 will be little, if at all, under 16-hands.

Is it possible to obtain by a first cross of a pure-bred Arab sire, upon the right stamp of a heavier and larger mare, an exceptionally good draft or work horse? Sir Wilfred Blunt appears to have had great success in obtaining very superior draft horses by using Arab sires and Suffolk Punch mares and says: "The cross with the Suffolk has been found particularly successful, giving not only wonderful good harness horses but also hunters of quite superior kind, some of them 16 hands in height, and nearly all 15.2. It is, however, for draft purposes that the Arabian Suffolk cross is most to be relied on."

The wonderfully kind disposition of the Arab is what most endears him to those who know him. Blunt says: In disposition, the Arabians are gentle and affectionate, familiar, indeed, almost to the extent of being troublesome. I have never seen an Arabian vicious, shy, or showing signs of fear." Of how great practical value, and what a source of comfort, safety and pleasure, in these days of automobiles and traction engines, are such qualities as gentleness, courage and horse sense.

I have not had an extensive personal experience or knowledge of the Arab horse, and have, therefore, quoted from others of very much greater knowledge, to prove the good qualities of the pure Arab, and his great value to produce as a sire, from other than Arab mares, according to the character, class and breeding of the dams, good work horses, driving, saddle and cavalry horses and general hacks, the Arab blood giving to all of them wonderful endurance and strength, soundness of constitution, beauty of form and action, and particularly a gentleness of disposition and courage combined, not to be found elsewhere among horse-kind.

I have owned but one pure-bred Arab. I bought him from J. A. P. Ramsdell, a well-known breeder, of New York State, in 1906, when he was a colt 15 months old. He was out of Nedjme, and sired by Garaveen. Nedjme was sent from Arabia to the World's Fair in Chicago, and was described in Country life in America, in the August, 1906, number, as "probably the best Arab mare ever brought to America." Garaveen was bred by the Reverend Mr. Vidal of England, out of Kushdil Bey, an imported Arab mare, and sired by Kismet, one of the most celebrated and valuable Arabs that ever left Arabia, and pronounced by Fred Archer, the renowned English jockey, to be the gamest horse he ever rode. I kept his colt, registered as "Jocklan," until I sold him last month, at 37 months old, to Honorable Clifford Sifton, who will use him for some experimental cross-breeding. When I sold him, he was broken to ride and drive. While full of life, gritty, strong and courageous, he was gentle and kind as a kitten. My experience with him makes it very easy for me to believe every kind and praiseworthy thing that is said of the Arab. I have now no interest in the Arab horse, but hope to possess one or more of them.

County Council.

Warden Agnew made a brief opening verbal address and also a written one. He expressed his pleasure in welcoming the members back to transact the business of the June session. This was the most important session of the year as it was at this time that rates were levied and the large expenditure of the year made. He recalled with pleasure the way that business was transacted at the January session and felt confident that the same harmony and good feeling which characterized that session would be maintained during this one. He was pleased that all were in good health and that prospects were good for crops and business. He urged that while members of council should naturally have a special care for their own municipalities, yet they should remember their general larger responsibility to do justice to the whole county and that their motto would be "Justice to all."

The clerk then read the minutes of last day of January session and a batch of communications, among which were the following:

County treasurer's estimate of moneys required to be raised to meet the expenditure of the County for 1910, amounting to $48,662 on the whole county and a further sum of $668 from which urban districts will be exempt. Mr. Parker in his communicatin referred to the good results which had followed the action of council in reference to hawkers and peddlers as shown in more licenses being taken out. For purposes of education the amount required was about $2000 in excess of previous years, principally caused by new sections and increase of inspectors' salaries,

Centre Grey and North Grey Farmers' Institutes sent in their usual reports and asked for the usual financial aid.

For the Salvation Army Rescue work, Secretary Pugmire asked a donation.

A. P. Westervelt wrote in reference to the County offering a prize at the Provincial Winter Fair in order to induc local stockmen to exhibit.

Wm. T. Lee, as president of the Owen Sound Horticultural Society, asked that it be placed on the same basis respecting grants as the Agricultural Society.

Geo. Mitchell wrote in the interests of Chas. Wolfe who was fined for peddling without a license. It was represented that Wolfe should have had his license sent in time to have saved him from prosecution and that he was entitled to reimbursement of the fine.

Strathcona Hospital, Mount Forest, asked for a grant from Grey County of $200 as this was the amount of grant made by Wellington county council last week.

Geo. J. Albery, clerk of St. Vincent, asked for refund of $51.50 expenses of a lunacy case. Drs. Howey and Oldham sent in accounts for the examination of lunacy patients.

Other accounts presented were from the County Solicitors, MacKay, Telford & Grosch $32, J. Harrison & Sons Co. $17.55 and $22,05, and from Wiarton, Chesley and Mount Forest high schools for educating pupils from Grey County.

Acknowledgements were read for grants of $50 to the Sick Children's Hospital and $10 to the Prisoner's Aid Society.

The County Council of Kent forwarded a resolution in reference to appointment of a Western Ontario drainage inspector.

The Deputy Minister of Education informed the council that the legislative grants for which the county was to provide an equivalent were $2715 to public schools and $84 to separate schools. The department grant to Owen Sound Collegiate Institute was $1424.55 and to the Meaford high school $1100.62.

Hector McDonald, of Priceville, high constable, who was appointed at the January session, presented his first report in which it was stated that some of the county constables were not furnished with handcuffs, which were a necessity for the proper discharge of their duties. He also termed it an oversight that in some villages there was neither a constable nor a magistrate.

A. D. Creasor, police magistrate of Owen Sound, asked the council to approve by resolution his appointment as police magistrate for the North riding of Grey, or other portion of the county and represented that there would be advantage from having cases tried by him instead of being referred to other justice of the peace. The appointment, if approved by the county council, would be made by the Lieutenant-Governor.

A resolution passed by the Good Roads Convention held in March asks the Legislation to increase the grant for good roads from one-third to one-half.

K. W. McKay, of St. Thomas, secretary of the Ontario Municipal Association, invited attendance at the convention to be held at Toronto in August.

When Clerk Rutherford had finished his budget one resolution was passed before adjournment. This was one of condolence and sympathy with Warden Agnew and his family on the untimely death of the Warden's son and the sorrow-stricken widow of the deceased was also included in the message. The resolution was moved by Dr. Hershey and Mr. Legate and carried by a standing vote when put to the meeting by the clerk. The Warden briefly responded.
