Empire Sugar Eaten Most Here

Canada Imported 260,000,000 Pounds From British Guiana

Sugar, so far as Canada is concerned, is almost entirely a British Empire product—that is, the raw cane sugar which she imports is brought from Empire countries. Last year, says Canada's Weekly, the Empire supplied Canada with considerably over 1,000,000,000 lb. of the raw product for refining in the Dominion, while the total that came from other countries, Cuba and Peru, was slightly over 6,000,000 lb. Canada imported on a 'per capita' basis about 100 lb. fo every man, woman and child, which goes to show how large a part sugar plays in the domestic economy. Also, 120,000,000 lb. of sugar was made from beets grown in Canada.

The largest quantity imported from any country was from British Guina at nearly 260,000,000 lb. Jamaica came next with 110,000,000 lb. From the Fiji Islands, in the Southern Pacific, came 134,000,000 lb., followed closely by Barbados and Trinidad.

Canada obtained large supplies of raw sugar also from Australia and British South Africa, while British East Africa in late years has been taking a hand in this trade, although the imports from that country are not yet quite so large as from the smaller islands of the British West Indies.

SLICED VERY THIN . .

"No Matter How Thin You Slice It—It's Still Bologney"

By SIXBITS

Carry on Hepburn! Carry on Rowe! For your carrying-on are giving the populace many a laugh, at a time when such are very welcome, even if they are not adding very greatly to the dignity of public affairs.

* * *

For when these lads get up on the public platform and start hurling adjectives, adverbs and other parts of speech around, they really let themselves go, and don't hold anything in reserve.

* * *

They are something like the large colored lady who went into the general store and proceeded to order full mourning in honor of her husband who had just got the worst of a cutting affair.

* * *

After she had ordered a black dress, ditto shoes, stockings, hat and so forth, she asked to be shown some all-black underwear—and was informed that the store didn't carry any of such bric-a-brac.

* * *

"But," said the clerk helpfully, "it doesn't make any difference. It wouldn't be seen anyway."

* * *

"Dearie," replied the relict with a sad shake of her head. "You-all don't know what I is like. When I mourns, I really mourns."

* * *

That must have been a highly exciting and rib-crushing series between the Orillia Terriers and Mimico Mountaineers—but, not for the first time, we put in with our worthy friend Ted Reeve in his statement that, wherever it is, it isn't lacrosse.

* * *

Tweny—thirty—or more goals per game may satisfy the desire of the modern spectator for swift action and frequent changes in the scoring—but those of us ancient enough to remember the glorious days of old, when a guy had to really earn a goal before he got one, simply cannot get very warm about such doings.

* * *

To us, the sticks these modern players carry look more like kiddies' toys—in fact, up around Elora, Fergus and those parts when we were young, little toddlers would have disdained to carry them.

* * *

Of course, any kind of lacrosse is better than none at all—and if they keep even this ghost of the game going, to ever-rising enthusiasm—every place except Toronto, it seems—perhaps there will come a day when the grand old sport will come out into the sunshine, on the green grass, where it belongs—and a lacrosse addict, asked how he was going to send a Saturday afternoon, First of July or Civic Holiday will look at his questioner with the same disgusted amazement as a good Orangeman would wear if queries as to his intentions for the Glorious Twelfth.

* * *

But even if today's lacrossists don't run as far, check as closely, or play as prettily as their fathers there is one thing you have to hand them—they wear the same old scars, bruises and contusions—and with, apparently, as little regard for same.

* * *

Injuries that would put followers of any other sport in the hospital seem to be like water on a duck's back—to coin a phrase—and only seem to spur them to greater efforts; just as it was back in the times when wives and sweeties of players starting off to visit St. Catharines, Brantford, and other hard-hitting hotbeds would take long lingering looks at them before they climbed on the train.

* * *

For they knew that, even if they did come back, they weren't going to appear nearly the same.

Prima Donnas Are Now Streamlined

Helen Jepson, now singing in her first movie appearance, says she believes that motion pictures are responsible for the streamline appearance of current day grand opera prima donnas, compared with the heftiness of some of the stars of a past decade.

Miss Jepson said, "all of the Metropolitan's younger singers are looking hopefully toward possible film careers, so they do a little dieting and a little exercising and try to keep trim lines.

Stuff and Nonsense

Friend — "Gosh, I need five bucks and I don't know where to get it."

Man — "I'm glad of that. I was afraid you thought you could get it from me."

The new farm laborer was sent to milk the cow, but as he was such a long time gone the farmer went to see what was delaying him. He found him feeding the cow with milk.

Farmer — "Here, I said milk the cow — not feed it."

New Laborer — "Well, I thought it came out a bit thin, so I am putting it through again."

Man — "Has your wife changed very much since you married her?"

Friend — "Yes, my habits, my own friends, and my hours."

It may be cowardly to kick a man when he is down, but it is sometimes necessary to get him up.

Dad — "My shaving brush is very stiff. I wonder what's wrong with it?"

Wifey — "I don't know. It was nice and soft when I painted the bird cage yesterday."

Florence — "Darling, I wish I could feel perfectly certain that I am the only girl you have ever loved."

Clarence — "So do I, dear."

Professor's Wife — "Did you know, dear, that it is 11 years today since we became engaged?"

Professor (preoccupied) — "Oh, my dear, it's high time we were getting married."

Tired Traveller — "Can I get anything to eat in this dirty dump?"

Negro Waiter — "Yas, suh, you kin."

Traveller — "Such as what?"

Negro Waiter — "Such as it is, sah!"

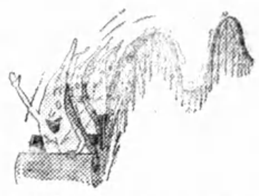
MINARD'S "KING OF PAIN" LINIMENT

A HIGH ROLL TIME



Ogden's Fine Cut puts you on the right track to all the high spots of smoking satisfaction. With this friendly, fragrant fine cut you'll hit new peaks of pleasure in rolling your own. Particularly if you're careful to use the best papers — "Chantecler" or "Vogue". There's a bigger 15c package of Ogden's, now.

P.S.— Your Pipe Knows Ogden's Cut Plug

No man is perfect — only the women.

A prominent official of the telephone company was rudely aroused from his slumbers by the insistent ringing of the telephone. After bruising his toe on a chair and "seeing the stars" he reached the telephone.

Official (growling) — "Hello!"

Loud Masculine Voice — "Are you an official of the telephone company?"

Official — "Yes. What can I do for you?"

Voice — "Tell me, how do you like getting out of bed at two o'clock in the morning to answer a wrong number call?"

Young Man — "I'm thinking of asking some girl to marry me. What do you think of the idea?"

Sweet Young Thing — "It's a great idea, if you ask me!"

Opportunity does not always knock at the door any more. Sometimes it sits at the curb and honks.
