POINTERS FOR SHOOTERS

Already the list of victims of hunting accidents has begun to swell. There are some fool people who should never be allowed out of their own back yards until they learn what a gun is and what it isn't. In the first place it isn't a child's plaything, nor is it an instrument which knows not accident. The things go off when not expected, and they will unexpectedly load themselves that they may carry off arms or legs of hunters, or fill men's coats with air holes. Hunters should remember these facts when they must play with shooting irons. It does but little harm to the sport for a fisherman to take his "bait" along with him to while away the time between bites, but when a hunter begins to scour his internals with the wet cleaning process there is a grave danger brewing. The cheering liquid has many times caused the companion of the imbiber to too closely resemble the deer expected, with the ineivitable resulting coroner's investigation. Hunters, bear in mind that you are not on a fishing expedition, and that the proper equipment for one will not serve on the annual hunt. It is easier to prevent a calamity than to cure it, therefore never point a gun at a fellow human, loaded or unloaded (gun or man), and never shoot when not absolutely positive that your game is what you think it is.

In these days of wireless telegraph, wireless telephone and a thousand and one such things, it is reasonable to expect wireless politics.

Was it a compliment a Socialistic speaker in Toronto paid women when he spoke in favor of woman suffrage and said: "I don't say they'll vote Socialistic, but it's easier to show them the light than it is to put sense into some men's heads."

The temperance campaign against liquor selling is not the only movement abroad to-day. Another temperance movement, and a worthy one, too, is that for temperance in athletics, notably running. The long dist nce run is being frowned down on every side and the popular limit appears to be fifteen miles. About fifteen yards would be our limit.

Around the world in 80 hours! This is the dream of one d'Almeda, who believes that the ideal flying machine is not that commonly known today, but rather after the style of the frigate bird of the southern Pacific islands. This bird attains a speed of some 240 miles an hour in flight, and Mr. d'Almeda thinks that with a flying machine a speed of 300 miles should be attained. Just how much of his dream will come true we cannot say, but the speed he so glibly speaks of would certainly be "going some."

The latest example of fool law making hails from Pennsylvania. Owing to the large number of foreigners employed there, and the correspondingly large number of murders, the legislators of that state framed a law providing punishment for every "foreigner" found hunting in that state. No fault could be found with the object of the law, but it was so carelessly constructed that even an Englishman or a Canadian is prohibited from hunting in the state. An Englishman who has been a resident of Pennsylvania for over ten years, but who has not been naturalized, was found hunting and received a term in prison as his reward. The law will probably be amended at next session of the Legislature.

The toll of worship that is accorded the successful "sport" in any line is heavy, and it is sometimess too heavy. In the case of a boxing champion the plaudits showered have surely turned his little brain. Having lots of cash to get rid of, he bought a powerful auto and proceeded to smash records and laws, resulting in repeated finings. Why the police should permit this pugilistic ass to break the laws so repeatedly and intentionally is unanswerable, but they appear to be waking up at last and the fool scrapper will likely get his deserts—a term in jail. If the offender was one of less prominence the offences would have been adequately punished long before this.

Considerable of a flutter in certain circles was caused by the action of the United States this past summer in putting a war ship on the great lakes as a training ship. Nervous patriots had a night-mare in which they saw these monsters of the deep blowing Canada sky high with their pea shooters, or an American army being transported across the lakes and making off with our beloved country. It was shown at the time that the equipment of this and sister boats would not be equal to the task, and so all unstrung patriotic nerves were quieted. But last week when it was made known that the wily Americans were fitting their training ships with modern fighting appliances in direct violation of a treaty formed over a hundred years ago, another flutter resulted. For various reasons this, too, has now subsided, and we may rest assured that our peace will be undisturbed for another season.

The modern system of dealing with crime and criminals is indeed a curious one. A crime is committed and suspicion falls on a certain individual. He is seized and put through a torturing trial even though innocent and there is no compensation. But let a crime be committed and suspicion avoid every person, as witness Bedford in connection with the Kinrade murder, then his confession must needs become a claim, and must be established as strongly as the claim of a polar discoverer. Even then, the attempt to establish a claim fails and the would-be penitent must remain free and unpunished for the crime to which he has confessed. Perhaps this system is natural, for even if a man was fool enough to commit a murder, yet he might well be expected to keep his own counsel about it, and the confession of the self-confessed but questionable murderer would only be supposed to serve some hidden or sinister purpose.

Irwin Takes a Poetical Kink

If Mrs. Pankhurst grows too gay
And tries to get upon the stump,
We'll steer her gently into jail
And feed her with a stomach pump.
—Kincardine Review.

And arter this if she's not good,
We swear by all that's ill, by gol,
To catch her when her time is up
And souse her in Aylesworth's canal.
--Durham Chronicle.

An actor in a Toronto theatre went blind while doing his turn. Acute indigestion was said to be the cause.

A Collingwood man is making money by extracting turpentine from pine stumps. He makes 25 gallons a day and clears $1.00 a gallon.

W. S. Russell, the noted Toronto broker, in his defence at Cleveland says that he acted in good faith in his mining ventures and believed all that was said in the circulars. Of course! He was a poor victim himself of misplaced confidence and credulity! A man, however, who published such statements as the circular contained could scarcely be expected to give incriminating evidence against himself.

Sykes street in Mesford should be called Canal street if water has anything to do with it. The state of the roads here are worse than any barn yard to be found anywhere and some attention should be given them in place of trying to always corall the finances of the town into some less-needed channel.—Express.

While it is a lamentable fact that in accounts of weddings the groom occupies the background, and appears to be among the least important of the various characters in the event, it remained for a Toronto paper last week to go the limit. The announcement of the wedding of a certain young lady was published, but it failed to give the groom's name! There must have been a reason for someone else other than the groom being called the best man.

In a boxing tournament at Toronto on Saturday night John C. Shute of Markdale won in a bout with one Smith, a colored man. It is all right to have the strength and skill, but there is a danger that the fists may rule the head. It is a questionable line of sport to say the least, and is falling into disfavour more and more, as well it might.

O. S. Advertiser: Last week a serious charge was laid against John McDonald, a young man who has been for years manager of a farm for Miss Matthews on the east side of the town. On the information of a young mrn named Drew, a warrant was issued for the arrest of McDonald on the charge of theft, the accused having gone away with a horse and rig, which he hrs been in the habit of doing for years past. County Constable Pearce found McDonald at Meaford and took him in charge as per the warrant, but shortly afterwards the prisoner got into communication with his mistress, who resides at Port Arthur, and informed her that he was under arrest and on what grounds the action had been taken. The sequel was that a telephone message came to Drew, whom we understand is a nephew of Miss Matthews, instructing him to pay all costs and have McDonald set at liberty. The accused has been before George Menzies, J.P, and as above indicated is not likely to suffer much from the circumstance. It may transpire that he has good grounds for action for wrongful arrest.

It will probably be well toward the middle of November before the steamer Athabasca will be ready for business. After being pulled off Flower Pot Island she went to Collingwood, where the dry dock was ready to receive her. She went on the dock Monday night, and a thorough examination of her hull was made at once. The injuries appear to be chiefly on the bottom, although there is one large hole punched in the bow. The stem is also twisted and several frames are bent. The repairs will be rushed, but it is not expected that less than three weeks will be occupied in restoring the steamer to commission. The cost of the repairs will exceed the amount first estimated and will run between $35,000 and $40,000.—Owen Sound Sun.

Militarism ran high in Toronto on Monday, the occasion of a fierce sham fight between the "reds" and the "blues" of the Toronto garrison. The battle was bloodless one, and the troops showed up well. The affair was an education for the men, but it is a safe guess that the influence of such an engagement as this is not in the direction of universal peace, unless we are on top of the heap.

Wm. Porter, of the Coulson House, Owen Sound, was fined $100 and costs for breaking the law by selling liquor.
