MILLINERY

MISS E. P. AMOS is again in charge of the showroom. This season the shapes are somewhat modified as to size. The high turban, the roll at the back, and side turn shapes being much worn. Large wings and sprays are extensively shown, and in colors green and ashes of roses are very popular.

Ladies' Mantles

In Ladies' Mantles we have some beautiful lines ranging in price from $8 to $23.50. This year the styles are semi-fitting, ⅞ length, and much the same as last season's garments. In Misses our prices run from $4 to $8.50; and children's from $2.75 to $5.00.

Dress Goods

In these, stripes are all the rage, and the more decided the stripe the more popular. We have a beautiful range in colors—black, marine, navy, green, mysteria, brown and taupe, and at prices ranging from 55c to $1.50

Furs

In Furs we have a complete range of the following lines—ladies' stoles, scarfs, muffs, caperines, etc. Also men's and ladies' fur and fur-lined coats, caps, mitts, gauntlets, etc.

Ready-Made Clothing

In Clothing we have the Progress Brand, made by H. Vineburg & Co., of Montreal, also W. R. Johnston & Co's clothing of Toronto. These are two of the largest clothing houses in the dominion. Their goods and prices are right.

Boots, Shoes and Rubbers

This is the season for the heavy shoes and they certainly are selling fast. We are full in all lines and are selling at prices which defy cometition. Come in and examine our stock.

RATIONAL OR IRRATIONAL?

Yea, verily, ours is a wicked community! Our fair Canada is struggling for existence under the weighty burden of the Lord's Day Alliance—a vampire sucking at the vitals of our land, depriving us of our opportunity for the Sunday relaxation! Such, in brief is the belief of the Rational Sunday League, and its great excuse for existence. To the writer it sounds like a very poor excuse at that.

In its annual report (the first, by the way) it claims that the movement to exclude entertainments and to abolish refreshments and innocent recreations on Sunday is at heart a movement to get a monopoly of Sunday for the church. And why not? What does the church do to the average man during the week? It is not a long shot to guess that as far as the churches affect the members of the "Rational" League during the week they might as well be locked up—or doing business in the Holy Land. They claim that the non-church-going public have a right to social, intellectual and moral privileges of their own choice. The average privilege of the non-church-goer is not intellectual or moral to any harrasing extent and when the Rational (?) movement is known to be backed largely by liquor interests a true idea of the morality of the scheme may be formed. The neatly rounded phrases will pull the wool over the eyes of many non-church-goers who will fail to note the fact that they are merely pawns in a game, and will fall heartily in accord with the scheme.

The League also strongly critizes the "methods of intimidation" used by the Lord's Day Alliance in threatening so-called offenders of the Lord's Day Act. It is described as an attempt to exercise semi-legal power. The Alliance is not on the job to simply play a game of spite work. An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth is not the slogan of this body. What if a man does unwittingly break the law? The Alliance has not judicial power. At best it could but lay a complaint. A warning is the more merciful, and in many cases, the more effective course; and the Alliance pursues it, believing it to be the best.

Another grievance of the Rational bunch is that public concerts on Sunday have been put out of business through the good offices of the Alliance. The Rational League would like to have them restored, but the law says no.

The natural course is downward and without such a body as the Lord's Day Alliance to keep things in tone there would soon be a state of "wide-openness" that would gratify the most irrational of "Rationals."

In this age of moral and temperance reform the struggles and wriggles of a departing vice are most wonderful to behold. There will be still more struggling before the booze makers all desert their stills, and turn the key in their doors for the last time.

ENGLISH AS THE DICTIONARY HAS IT.

Numerous men who have attained a certain degree of prominence in the affairs of this world, and knowing it feel it their duty to help some other aspiring soul along the way, at times give advice about good reading. Very often a good course of study in a dictionary is the course advised as a short cut to wisdom. The dictionary is extremely convenient at times, but who enjoys the sensation of hurriedly opening a book in search of the meaning of a certain word and being chased through volume after volume to get to the root of the matter? As for instance, in searching for the meaning of furrow, we find it is a trench; a trench, a ditch; a ditch, a long channel of water; a channel, a groove; and wonderful to note, a groove is the fixed routine of one's life. There you be, to plough a furrow is the fixed routine of one's life! But this may be a peculiar exception, so we glance at another word; take the word "reap". To reap is to gather; to gather, to assemble; to assemble, to convene; to convene, to convoke; and to convoke is to call together. At this rate it is only necessary to stand in the middle of a ten-acre field and call the grain together in order to reap it. Yea, verily, the English is a peculiar tongue. After such an educational course as this, one is content to remain obscure and let wisdom be for those whose education comes not from dictionaries.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

The London letter in Saturday Night tells of the wonderment which peaches "which are grown in the open in Ontario" caused in the London market. Really these intelligent lords of creation are learning, aren't they? Just to think of it, peaches grown right in the open air in the colony—grown probably in crevasses of the icebergs or in the shelter of some large snowdrift; or are they grown under the snow altogether, and do the natives dig them out as needed? Isn't it strange ow 'ardy they be? .....When will the average Londoner get a bit of his native fog out of his head, and have room for something else? No, Canada is not buried under mountains of ice—nor is it a land of eternal snows. Yes, we have a month or two of summer, and we don't ALWAYS have to melt ice to get water to drink.

Apropos of this, a good yarn was told the writer by a Londoner who had done well in this country and had returned home on a visit. His sister said to him: "I say, Alf, the people hout there don't live in 'ouses, do they?"

In an apartment of the next world is foretold weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. This is explained by the absence of dentists in that place. Is it? Ask any patient of a "painless" artist and be guided by his answer.

Halley's comet is coming! Already it has been sighted, travelling at the rate of a million miles an hour. Astronomers tell us that it will whisk the earth with its tale. Something unique, eh, to have a ride on the tail of a comet?

Because he gave 'the distress signal' of a secret society at a trial and won a favourable verdict from the jury an American was sentenced for contempt of court. It is well. No man should claim the protection of a secret society to escape punishment, and no secret society should extend that protection in the face of undisputable evidence of guilt.

Women voted for the first time in Norway last week. The result will not be favourable to the suffragist cause elsewhere, as they defeated the government that gave them the franchise. Or did the men do it in spite? Something happened, anyhow for the Radical government was defeated. It looks like a case of biting the hand that fed.

It is rumored that a group of generals holding high official positions in Spain held a secret meeting recently. The proposal was to substitute a military government for the constitutional regime and to make King Alfonso its absolute head. A more likely gathering is that which would decide to make Alfonso the country's OBSOLETE head.

Major Arthur Brodrick has returned to England from Canada according to a despatch, and proposes to ship unemployed militia men to Canada, where they may join a colonial force. This will open a new field. Shortly unemployed sailors will be coming to the "colony" to get a job on the navy. They'll have to trot back home, though, for the politicians will have sufficient friends for all vacancies—and lots to spare.

Canada is still somewhat of a small boy. Boylike we cannot stand anticipation, it would seem, to judge by our chosen representatives at Ottawa. They see a distant prospect of a few war ships to play with, but with the impatience of youth can't wait and so will borrow a couple of third class cruisers from the motherland and at once will have their new plaything. Go ahead, boys, but be careful not to fall overboard, unless there is someone with you who can swim, anyway the water's likely to be co-o-o-old!

It is stated that the horrors of the Russian exile in Siberia will be no more, but instead, by withdrawing the exiles Russia will remove the stigma from that vast country and leave it open for more colonist. There is a snatch of grim humor in this—formerly a land of terror at one stroke to become a land of happy homes. But there are many Russian homes that will never more be entirely happy as a result of the exile to the Siberian mines. The proposal is to erect houses of correction in various parts of the empire—but it is easy to forsee the style that will be pursued in "correcting," if one is to judge by past events, and it is debatable as to which is to be preferred the mines or the "correction.

Prince Ito of Japan was buried with Pagan rites last week. It is easy to scoff at the mystic performances of the Japs to find favour in the eyes of the gods, and to propitiate the spirits, but are there not others who are superstitious? Did you ever see a person avoid sitting down at a table which had twelve people around it already? And are there not a thousand and one signs that are religiously avoided by people of your acquaintance? Of course you never do it. But the Japanese superstition is only one form—every country has it, though no two have it in the same manner. The very strangeness of their customs furnish an air of foolishness in our eyes, and would not occidental "signs," which so many profess to ignore (yet observe most religiously), be ridiculous in the oriental eye?

Berlin will shortly seek incorporation as a city. A proposition is on foot to unite Berlin and Waterloo in the incorporation, and discussion towards that end has been going on in the two towns for some time. It is a moot, point whether the name of the new city will be Lagerlin or Beerloo.—Mt. Forest Confederate.
