THE GROOM WAS SHY~

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

CHAPTER VIII

It was almost one o'clock when Judy got home but Gram had been much too excited to sleep.

She met her at the top of the stairs.

"Well, tell me about it, Kitten." She followed her granddaughter into her room. "Did you have a nice time?"

"Lo—vely," Judy yawned, sitting down and kicking off her slippers. "Much better than I expected. Marlie and I played for the rest to dance, and we played bingo afterward."

Gram sat down and folded her hands.

"Yes, go on! Did everybody like your new dress?"

"Yum, I guess so," Judy yawned again. "Peter did. Anyway, he told me I looked like a little daffodil."

"Maybe he meant daffy." Gram looked pleased. "And what did you think of Marlie's big moment?"

Too Dumb To Notice

"Tucky's very beautiful. But a little silly, I think. She flirted with Peter behind Marlie's back. In fact, I thought she made a disgusting play for him. Well, Lisa did too, for that matter. I don't think Mike liked it very well. But Marlie was too dumb to notice he was being two-timed right under his nose."

"So Peter was quite a hit," Gram beamed. "I thought he would be. How do you like him?"

"He's a perfect gentleman," Judy said without enthusiasm.

"And very handsome too, if you ask me. If I were a young girl, I'd go for him in a big way."

"Too bad you're not young, Gram." Judy got up to slip her new gown over her head. "You'd be the belle of the town, I'll bet."

"I never lacked for beaus in my day," the old woman chuckled reminiscently. "Your grandfather thought I was a pretty bad flirt. But he soon tamed me. That's what happens when a girl falls in love. Did Peter ask to see you again?"

"You ask too many questions." Judy sat down to take off her stockings. "No, he didn't. Did you expect him to?"

"He will." Gram yawned and got up. "You looked very lovely, and Peter isn't blind."

Plenty Of Other Girls

"Gram!" Judy sounded provoked. "Just because you asked Peter Johns to take me to a party, don't think he has to bother taking me out again. There were plenty of other girls there tonight, and they were all making eyes at him."

"That wouldn't interest a boy like Peter. I think he would prefer a girl of your type."

"I do believe," the granddaughter yanked her nightie out of the drawer, "you planned this whole thing deliberately!"

"Don't be absurd." Gram prepared to make a quick exit before Judy could make any more accusations. "Well, I'm glad you had a nice time. Get to sleep now. You're not used to being up so late."

The next morning Marlie and Judy surveyed the Jones house with sinking spirits.

"You'll have to get some one in to clean this place up thoroughly." Judy ran her fingers over a spot where a cigarette had burned the dining-room table. It would take me a week to get it looking right."

Marlie was horrified. "I'll send for Mrs. Tutté. She does mother's housecleaning."

"And you'd better tell her not to do any talking about it," warned Judy. "If your mother finds out, we'll both get the blame. Mike broke one of her best cups."

"Maybe she won't count 'em," Marlie hoped dispiritedly.

Judy bent down and picked up a cigarette stub from the living-room carpet.

"Here's a hole. Oh, lordie! You better check up all over the house and learn the worst right away."

In A Bad Hole

"Mom is sure to see that," Marlie said dolefully. "Well, I'll call Mrs. Tuttle and at least we'll get all the mess cleaned up. But we can't do much about the damage."

"You better just find a hole and crawl in and stay there till next Christmas." Judy could not help smiling at Marlie's wobegone expression. "Or go west, young man, go west."

The phone rang. Judy picked up a dustcloth because she wanted an excuse to find out who it was. Marlie answered in the hall.

"Oh, hello, Lisa." He made no effort to sound cheerful. "Yeah, I had a swell time."

There was a pause, then Marlborough said hesitatingly, "Well, I don't know. Yeah, I guess so. Too bad your aunt's sick. Okay, I'll take you. About six-thirty."

He hung up, looking a little pale, Judy thought.

"Bad news?" she asked curiously.

"No—well, not very. It was Lisa. Her aunt in Albany is sick and she wants me to drive her to her house this evening to see how she is."

"Um," Judy put the dust-cloth away. "Are you going to take Tucky too?"

Marlie shrugged and made an effort to look indifferent.

"Nope. Guess not. Lisa says she heard Tucky ask your doctor to come over tonight, and she thinks he accepted."

"I don't care, of course." Judy felt a little sorry for her crestfallen neighbor. "I saw her making a play for him."

"You did?" Marlie followed her out to the porch. "What did she do?"

"Oh, just silly things. Rolled her big blue eyes and called him "Doctah' in her best Southern dialect."

"Maybe you imagined it." Marlie plucked a morning-glory from a vine and held it to his nose. "Tucky is nice to everybody."

"Oh, sure," Judy scoffed. "Well, it's a good thing you have Lisa to console you, if Tucky really does leave you flat for the handsome doctor. That seems to be her intention. So long. Don't jump into the lake now."

A Different Girl

FEATURE — WAY — MAY 4th

She ran down the steps before Marlie had a chance to answer. It was a busy morning in the drug store, and Judy had very little time to think. It was shortly before noon that she looked up and saw Peter Johns.

He was in white tennis pants and sport shirt with short sleeves and turned-down collar. And he was handsomer than the evening before, flushed, and with his hair curling wildly over his head.

He showed flashing white teeth in a friendly grin as he sat down at the counter.

"Do you suppose a drink of something cool will spoil my lunch?" he asked, lighting a cigarette.

"Well," Judy smiled back at him shyly, "I suppose I couldn't prescribe it as being very good for your digestion."

"A poor business woman, but a good nurse." Peter's eyes crinkled at the corners with gayety. He gave his order.

While Judy mixed his drink, he watched her. She was a vastly different girl from the buttercup-gowned one of the evening before. Trim and immaculate in a big white apron, which completely swathed her little figure. Her hands were small and white and moved with quick officiency.

There was a lull in business and Judy and Peter were the only two in the store when she sat the drink before him.

"I came to ask you to lunch," the doctor said as he took a sip and nodded approvingly.

"Oh!" Judy looked surprised. "That's very kind of you, doctor, but I can't get away. Sam Calhoun won't be back till after two, and we're very busy these hot afternoons."

Peter looked disappointed.

"You don't have to work this evening, do you?"

"Well," Judy hesitated. "I usually do."

"Nonsense!" he chided. 'That's too much activity. I prescribe a little relaxation. There's a new show opening in Albany and I'd like nothing better than to enjoy it with you. If you say nay I'll call your grandmother. She said you were to look after me this summer."

"Well," Judy turned and wiped a glass, "I guess I can manage it."

Peter finished his drink and then jumped up.

"I'll phone for the tickets. Be ready at seven, sharp, so we can have a nice drive in the June twilight. I think you've been spending too much time cooped up in this drug store."

When he had gone Judy smiled to herself. So Tucky hadn't succeeded in making her date with Peter, after all. That was funny.

It was sort of nice, knowing that Peter could have taken Tucky, but preferred her. She could hardly wait to get home to tell Gram.

It's Best To Be A Red-head When It's A Question Of Cold Cash, Hollywood Make-up Expert Claims.

From a fiction standpoint, the choice may lie between blondes and brunettes, but when it comes to cold cash, it's better to be a redhead.

Perc Westmore, a make-up authority, disclosed today that he paid $1,920 for 24 ounces of natural red hair to fashion a wig for Bette Davis—which is $80 an ounce.

"Women who possess natural red hair are not anxious to part with it at any price—or their husbands will not permit them to cut it off," he said.

He said tests of dyed red hair or different shades showed a crimson reflection on Miss Davis' features under white technicolor lighting. Only natural red failed to reflect.

Beauty for YOU

The Secrets of Good Looks

by Barbara Lynn.

HAVE YOU SHAPELY LEGS?

Shorter skirts are here, and attention is being focussed more on calves and ankles.

FOR THIN LEGS. Lighter shades of stockings often create a plumper effect.

Massage will help. Use gentle stroking movements, working from the instep to the ankle, and from ankle to the knee. A good fattening mixture is made with 3 parts of olive oil to one of lanolin. Put the lanolin in a jar and stand in very hot water until it melts, then slowly add the olive oil, beating all the time. Apply it generously to the legs, massaging as described above. Keep the jar handy for future use and heat before using.

FOR FAT LEGS. To reduce fat legs, massage as follows: Cover legs and ankles with a good lather of palmolive soap. Massage well in, then rinse dry, cross the legs and dust talcum heavily on the upper leg. Next pinch firmly between fingers and thumb, using quick vigorous movements.

After at least ten minutes of this, take the ankle between both hands, and wring it mercilessly, twisting one hand to the right and the other to the left. Repeat with the other leg.

Whilst undergoing these leg treatments, take a dash of Kkovah health salts in a glass of water every morning, to tone up your system.

Complete leg treatments (slimming and fattening) may be obtained, as well as leaflets on Face, Eyes, Hands, Bust, Feet, Slimming, Underweight, Superfluous Hair, Reducing in Spots, by sending 3c stamp for each.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

By William Ferguson

ALTHOUGH there are some exceptions to the rule, beautiful birds seldom have beautiful songs. This, of course, is only reasonable, since gayly colored birds would be made more conspicuous by song. Most of the world's most brilliantly colored birds content themselves with a few raucous notes.

DELICIOUS CANADIAN DISHES

What could be more patriotic than a loyalty to Maple syrup on your bill of fare? Nothing will bring more loyalty to the cook and adherence to the slogan "Just like Mother Made." Three recipes follow one for pancakes; one for waffles for those who are fortunate enough to have an electric waffle iron, and thirdly a simple maple syrup dessert.

PANCAKE RECIPE

2 cups sifted pastry flour or 1½ cups pastry flour and ½ cup whole wheat flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1¾ cups milk
¼ cup melted butter

Measure flour and sift with baking powder and salt. If whole wheat flour is used, toss in after sifting the white flour and baking powder. Add beaten egg, milk and melted butter. Add slowly the liquids to dry ingredients. Some eggs vary as does the flour; if batter should be thin, add more milk if necessary. Pour or drop rounds of batter on hot frying pan. When bubbles appear turn and brown on the other side. Serve piping hot with maple syrup.

MAPLE SYRUP CREAM

1 1/3 cups (1 can condensed milk)
2/3 cup maple syrup
½ cup whipping cream
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
½ cup pecan nuts
1 pint envelope plain gelatine

Boil milk and syrup in double boiler. Remove from heat and stir in gelatine, which has been soaked in ¼ cup cold water. Beat with egg beater a few rounds to insure smoothness, then pour into wet moulds. Chill. Unmold and serve with the whipped cream, with sugar added sprinkled with the nuts. Serves six.

WAFFLES

1½ cups sifted flour, ¼ cup whole wheat flour or 2 cups pastry flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 egg yolks
3 egg whites beaten stiff
½ cup cream
½ cup milk
4 tablespoons melted butter

Sift flour, baking powder and salt. If using whole wheat too, toss in after sifting other dry ingredients. Then add well beaten egg yolks, milk and cream, and lastly, the melted butter. Drop and cook on electric waffle iron in the usual way. Serve with plain maple syrup or a thinly whipped cream with shaved maple sugar added. Waffles are not synonymous with breakfast any more for they can be dressed up with a varied wardrobe, making them a well behaved addition for luncheon or evening as well as breakfast.

Jacket Dresses For Sightseeing

Coat Can Be Removed, Should Have Long Sleeves

NEW YORK.—Two-piece jacket dresses are the most practical choice on a normal day of fair sight-seeing. It's a little better if the jacket has long sleeves, too. For you know how undessed you feel in bare arms when a wind sweeps up.

Choose Washable Fabrics

These jacket dresses are formal enough enroute and for dining, yet they are practical since the jacket can be removed. If it's cool, or you're staying out for dinner, remember how unpredictable our weather is and take a wrap along.

In fabrics, consider pure silk frocks, for they can be washed. Consider cotton for the same reason, and spun rayon and linen crash, because they are so cool and non-crushable.

Fiery, Itching Toes and Feet

Here is a clean, stainless antiseptic oil now dispensed by chemists at trifling cost, that will do more to help you get rid of your trouble than anything you've ever used.

Its action is so powerfully penetrating that the itching is instantly stopped; and in a short time you are rid of that bothersome, fiery eczema. The same is true of Barber's Itch, Salt Rheum, Itching Toes and Feet—other irritating unsightly skin troubles.

You can obtain Moone's Emerald Oil in the original bottles at any modern drug store. It is safe to use—and failure in any of the ailments noted above is rare indeed.

Accessories Are Very Important

They Form The Luxurious Part Of A Woman's Costume This Season—Choose Them Carefully.

Accessories are the really luxurious parts of the feminine costume this season. Carefully chosen, they can give a woman a most elegant appearance, even when she is wearing a simple tailored suit or a dress devoid of special decoration.

The accessories include a bag, an umbrella, a portable waterproof rain cap, a scarf with matched handkerchief, gloves, a boutonniere and fanciful jewels, and even the decorative shoes now in vogue fall into the category of accessories.

Blending Colors

One important rule is to be followed in choosing such accessories: There must always be one, two or three harmonious combinations. Thus the bag blends with the gloves and sometimes with the shoes, or there is color or tone harmony between the gloves, the scarf and the handkerchief or between earrings, brooches and clips.
