THE LIBERAL POLICY-IN PAVOR OF RECI-PROCITY WITH THE STATES-THE ATTI-TUDE OF THE MINISTERIALISTS - DE-NOUNCING THE COMBINES-THE MAN ITOBA CRISIS - NEGOTIATIONS WITH MR. GREENAWAY-THE SCOTT ACT AMEND-[Special correspondence of The Post.]

OTTAWA, March 3rd.

The forecast given in last week's letter has already been verified, so far as the policy to be adopted by the liberals is concerned. The decision of the caucus held on Tuesday last was in favor of reciprocity with the United States in as large measure se can be secured. The very sext day Sir Richard Cartwright placed upon the notice paper a resolution in favor of the Canadian government entering upon negotiations with a view to arranging for free trade between the two countries so far as concerns those articles which are not subject to excise or internal revenue taxes. The exception is made to meet the objection raised in some quarters-and a very important point it is too—that free trade in excisable articles would soon flood Canada with American whiskey. As the object is to promote trade, not to interfere with existing regulations for promoting "peace, order and good government" there is no stepping aside from the principle involved stepping aside from the principle involved in making this exception of excisable articles. It has been arranged that if the Fisheries treaty and all the papers relating to it can be laid before the house in time the debate on Sir Richard's resolution shall take place on Wednesday next. [The debate has been postponed for a week or two owing to the absence of the protocols.] RECIPROCITY AND THE POLITICAL PARTIES.

So far as the liberals are concerned, it is believed that commercial unionists. revenue reformers and all others are thoroughly and enthusiastically united in favor of the proposed resolution. Extended trade relations with the United States are the object of all the proposals that have been made and the present resolution forms a broad platform upon which all who desire to see the present shackles struck from the arms of trade can unite. casting their probable attitude is to find in which is quoted the annexationist languout what the government itself will decide | age of the St. John Globs, by the following to do, and this is not an easy matter in the enquiry: "Whether it is the intention of ies negotiations. Sir Charles Tupper stated the other day that these papers would show that negotiations had taken place relating to trade matters as well as to the fisheries. Whatever attitude Sir Charles took at Washington the govern-Charles took at Washington the government may be expected to take in relation to Sir Richard's resolution. The probability is that, while hostile to any extended trade relations except of such a one sided character as would suit the manufacturing rings of Canada and would not be considered by the people of the United States, the government will so far bow to public opinion throughout the Dominion as public opinion throughout the Dominion as to seek to kill the resolution by a side wind rather than openly. While declaring themselves anxious for Reciprocity they themselves anxious for Reciprocity they will probably propose some amendment which will mean everything or nothing just as the leader may be inclined to interpret it, and under which they will not be obliged to take any action whatever. The fact is that the manufacturing combines have put the government in power and keep it thefe. With Free Trade between Canada and the United States, the opportunity possessed by these combines to fleece the people of Canada would be gone and they must go with it. And, just now, the government has no influence to substitute for the combines as vote-makers. The object of the government, therefore, unless they have some other election influence preparing for the next appeal to the people, must be to offer Reciprocity in natural products alone which the Americans care little or nothing for, and deny Reciprocity in manufactures as well, which is what the Americans want.

INVESTIGATING THE COMBINES.

INVESTIGATING THE COMBINES. the house of commons the other day, of a prominent government supporter, Mr. N. C. Wallace, of West York, roundly de moved the following:—"That this house nouncing the country so long, and he did it with hearty good will, too. Apparently his action leaves those tory organs and orators who have persistently denied that there was a combine or an overcharge in regard to any article of general consumption in rather a bad predicament, and it is rather amusing to notice their efforts at reconciling their former statements with approval of what Mr. Wallace said. The fact is, though even many members of parliament do not knew it, that Mr. Wallace s arted out to denounce the coal ring and to demand that its methods should be investigated by parliament, but finding that he could not hope to confine their investigated by parliament, but finding that he could not hope to confine their investigated by parliament, but finding that he could not hope to confine their investigated by parliament, but finding that he could not hope to confine their investigated by parliament, but finding that he could not hope to confine their investigation to that point with such cases as those of the sugar ring staring the people in the face and so, making a virtue of necessity, he denounced combinations wholly and severally of every kind, and moved for a nouncing the combines which have been ciling their former statements with approval of what Mr. Wallace said. The fact is, though even many members of parliament do not knew it, that Mr. Wallace a arted out to denounce the coal ring and to demand that its methods should be investigated by parliament, but finding that he could not hope to confine their investigation to that point with such cases as those of the sugar ring staring the people in the face and so, making a virtue of necessity, he denounced combinations wholly and severally of every kind, and moved for a special committee to investigate them. Mr. Edgar had placed a notice in the paper the same day calling for a committee for the same purpose, but that of Mr. Wallace had preceded by a short time. There was a lively and interesting discussion on the subject of combines, their sause, effects and cure. The conservative speakers all practically admitted the existence of these rings and favored legislation to suppress or regulate them, while the liberals claimed that the true system was to take away the teriff props which support these concerns and let them come down of their own weight. Though, as an argument, the liberals had the best of it, they did not abow good judgment in antagonizing their new friends. The committee has been appointed and will meet soon, but if the fiberals go on in the spirit in which they began, the conservatives will band themselves together to protect their tariff idol, whereas, if they are left alone they will themselves draw out information from the witnesses to be examined which will be of inchesible heads to the community and to the liberal cause.

FERSES "RESCHARTIONS."

The information is confirmed that Mc.
Greenway and Mr. Martin of the new liberal Manitoba government are coming to Ottown to "negotiate" with Sir John

Macdonald concerning their Manitoba railway situation. This may turn out all right, but those who look for that result must surely do so on the strength of the witty Frenchman's dictum that "it is the unexpected which happens." With a strong liberal government in power appearations on the strong liberal government in power liberal government li witty Frenchmen's dictum that "it is the unexpected which happens." With a strong liberal government in power spring appro ching when operations on the Red River Valley Railway can be begun and rapidly pushed through, and money galere offered to carry out the enterprine, it is hard to see what there is for the Manitobaus to "negotiate" about. Sir John Macdonald has in the house five out of six Manitoba representatives as his own supporters. If he wanted to arrange anything he surely would make the first effort through that agency; but instead of that Mr. Greenaway and Mr. Martin, two strong opponents, comedown to "negotiate" and that at a time when they have every. strong opponents, come down to "negotiate" and that at a time when they have everything they want and Sir John has everything to lose. Liberals, and especially Manitobs liberals—and by that I mean lovers of equal rights and liberty—may well view with apprehension such steps as have just been taken in relation to Manitobs. It is devoutly to be hoped that the Manitobs representatives may not be induced to forego any of their dearly-bought advantages.

Contrary to expectation, Mr. Jamies of Lanark, has again come forward with his bill to amend the Scott act. The action of the conservative Dominion government in blocking necessary amendments to this set, and of the liberal provincial government in attempting to enforce an admittedly unworkable law, has caused not a little annoyance and loss to the liberal cause. The majority of active Scott act supporters are liberals, while there is a very considerable section of their party holding very strong views against such legislation. Consequently not only has their party been brought into unreserved discredit in Ontario through the Scott act, but there has been unnecessary friction and decided loss in relation to Dominion affairs. The principal value of the Scott act to the Dominion government, therefore, has been to keep the liberals in hot water. It will be remembered that last year Sir John Macdonald voted squarely with the whiskey party on all the important questions coming up in relation to the act. Such a course was perfectly safe for he allenated but few of the comparatively small number of temperance votes in his party. But in view of the wide attention drawn to his recent attendance at Methodist revival services here, and the active part he took in them—aside altogether from the question of his personal conversion to a religious life, which is, of course, beyond and above newspaper discussion—he cannot with any grace vote as he did last year, and his followers have got so accustomed to voting as he does, that if he gives his influence never so lightly in favor of the Scott act, Mr. Jamieson's bill will probably carry. This will much more than offset the recent defeat in Halton.

CAN'T VOTE UP TO THEIR "BLUE CHINA."

THE SCOTT ACT IN THE COMMONS—A LIVELY DEBATE-THE GOVERNMENT DECLINES TO AMEND THE ACT-ONE RULE FOR

AGAIN. [Ottawa correspondence of the Globe.] The greater part of Tuesday afternoon was spent in a discussion which may have more important results than any that will follow it this session. The subject was the amendment of the Scott act, and it came up in such a form as to enable the temperance conservatives in the house to show whether the temperance cause or the conservative party was the first in their estimation. With one exception, and that one not a strong advocate of temperance, The strange spectacle was presented in they chose to stand by the party. The do not now go into committee of supply, to have some policy on a question so important and undertake the amendment of a law so important as this. He referred to the fact that when the Mackensie government was in power one of the supporters of the leader of the opposition of that day, now the prime minister, proposed a resolution declaring that it was the duty of the government to being in a prohibitory itomer faw, and the party of which these gentlement were members did all flay could to fisce the government to take such a course. Those who held that it was the duty of the government to pass a grahibitory law must hold it to be right that the government should packet; and make workable the legislation of a protectory character already in the estatus hask. (Cheers, Birefley these remarks law so important as this. He referred ilike Mr. Mill's was brief and emphatic enough to prove that he regards the temperance vote, so-called the circury slight consequence. He compared in the first place that Mr. Mills had not proven that there were defects in the Canada Temperance act, and sapiently remarked that impediments to the enforcement of the act must be found before they could be removed. He enlarged on this idea at some length by referring to the manful efforts made to enforce the act, which have resulted so successfully, and quoted these as proofs that in these respects there were no impediments. "This motion," he said, "has proved to me more than any other the necessity of consideration of the subject as a moral and not a political question. I give every credit for ability and earnestness to those who are called the temperance party, but they do not in their numbers seem to be able in any way to control the legislation or adminstration of the country. Which ever party is in power, they have found before and will find again that the only true way is to consider this question apart from politics as a moral question apart from politics as a moral question, which men of either party can support. This resolution in its vaguenese and want of certainty cannot be received in the house." (Cheers.) He closed with a barely perceptible sneer at Mr. Mill's motives in bringing up the resolution.

MR. LAURIER

MR. LAURIER made a brief but forcible speech. He in timated in the politest manner possible that the premier's inability to see what amendments were needed in the Scott act was the bliudness of one who would not see, and reminded the premier of the deputations that had called upon him to urge changes in the act and the amending bill introduced without effect. He agreed that this question was in its nature a moral question, but pointed out that it had assumed a legal spirit by reason of a law being placed on the statute book to regulate the liquor traffic. The principle of that bill was right or it was wrong. If right the bill should be made workable; if wrong it should be repealed. This was a subject, be contended, upon which the government, if it would do its duty, must have an opinion. Mr. Mills, he said, in presenting this resolution was only carrying out what he advocated again and again. Then arose was the blindness of one who would not the erstwhile temperance advocate, the promoter on many occasions of a bill through which he made a show of desiring to make the act workable. He looked surto make the act workable. He looked surprised and somewhat embarrassed and as good as acknowledged it in his speech, which was longer than any other during the debate, with one or two exceptions. He acknowledged that he would vote against Mr. Mills' amendment, and immediately sought to shield himself behind the Dominion alliance. That body, he said, had always adopted the policy of keeping temperance clear of party politics, and jumped to the conclusion that amendments to the Scott act were equally to be treated as good as non-party matters, and treated as good as non-party matters, and that he would violate the sacred principle if he voted for the resolution in this case. He was at one with the hon, mover in desiring to have the Scott act made workable, and promised to press his oft-rejected bill, which he has again introduced. He professed himself hopeful of success this year, and not only this, but the Dominion alliance intended to test the sentiment of the house again on the question of general prohibition. Mr. Macdonald (Huron), in a short speech, urged upon the government the duty devolving upon them of amending the act so as to make it worksole. Mr. Freeman. of Queen's, Nova Scotia, then took the floor. Mr. Freeman spoke rather fretfully, as if he found himself bound to do something he did not like. He imputed wrong motives to the other side and took Mr. Jamieson's position as to partylem and temperance. He thought it would be better that these amendments to the Scott act should be made by men known to be sound as temperance men than by a gov-erament that might be indifferent or even nuetile. He urged the opposition to support these amendments when they were brought up, and concluded :-"This is the course the opposition should take and not press the matter

WHEN WE DIDN'T WANT IT." a remark which caused a general roar of laugh-MAGRENZIE AND ANOTHER FOR JOHN A. ter, for it evidently expressed exactly the feeling of himself and other temperance men that they would rather be allowed to deal with temperance matters at times and in ways better suited to party exigencies. Mr. Scriver, as a member of the alliance, said his understanding of their attitude was different from that of Mr. Jamieson's, and reminded that gentleman that a few years ago the alliance sent a deputation to ask the government to make the amendments, some of which were included in the hon, gentleman's bill. He, (Mr. Scriver), gave it as his opinion that the amendments to the Scott act could not be secured except by the intervention of the government. Mr. Fisher, who is a member of the alliance, and one of the strongest temperance men in the house, spoke at some length and with great force. He pointed to the attitude of the temperance men on the other side, virtually declaring that they preferred party to temperance, and said if that was the temper to be displayed, they could hardly carry any temperance legislation through. He went on to speak of the importance of the act, of the geod it had done even in its imperfect state, and urged the necessity of amendments to make it workable. The point against the temperance men on the government side for their attitude on this question was further pressed home by Dr. Wiisen, of Elgin, in a calm but strong speech. Mr. Paterson spoke with all his accustomed ability in the way of bringing out the points in the clearest and strengest light. His best point was in asking Mr. Jamieson what hope he had of passing. Sir Richard Cartwright went over the history of the Scott act, showing how the temperance men had demanded it and how the Mackenzie government had taken the responsibility of it, and contrasted the attitude of the temperance men had demanded it and how the Mackenzie government and another for a government and that of the temperance men among the government and another for a government with its present leader?" (Cheere).

HON. MR. FOSTER. ter suited to party exigencies. Mr. Scriver, as a member of the allianco, said his understand-known and honored throughout Ontario, some years ago when as Professor Foster he travelled throughout the province delivering temperance lectures, then spoke. He did not once special pleading, succeing at the opposition in relation to temperance, and arguing to prove that the municipalities which adopted it should themselves enforce the Scott act. He was followed by Mr. Davies, who dressed the hon. minister down in fine style, employing with telling effect the fine powers of reasoning, ridicule and demandiation of which he is possessed. The vote was then taken, everybody expected that there would be a unanimous vote of the conservatives against the resolution, but no less a man than Alonso Wright the "King of the Gatineau," who represents Ottawa county and worships Sir John Macionald, actually voted with the opposition. The following is the division list:—

community towards deserving members was never perhaps more strongly manifested than it was last Tuesday evening, when the friends of Mr. Archibald Bell and family, to the number of 75 or 80, assembled at their residence, to bid them good-bye and god-speed, on the eve of their departure for their new home in Toronto. After an hour had been spent in pleasant conversation, singing, etc., and another in discussing the contents of the baskets, the Rev. R. Mallett, M. A., was called to the chair, and the following addresses were read by Mr. Robert Calderwood and Mr. Jas. McPherson, the former in behalf of friends and fellowworkmen and the latter in behalf of brother masons:—" On this, the eve of brother masons:—" On this, the eve of brother masons:—" On this, the eve of your departure from among us, we, your friends and fellow workmen of the village of Longford and vicinity, desire to express our deep regret at losing from our number one whose many good qualities have won our respect and esteem. During your six years residence in this place you have made many warm friends, who will ever be pleased to hear of the prosperity and happiness of yourself and your esteemed family. NEW MILL.-There is talk of granting a onus to Mr. Porritt to encourage him to rebuild his mill, lately destroyed. We hope it may be done, as Mr. Porritt is deserving of encouragement, being one of our most enterprising villagers.

Saw Mill.—We hear that our grainbuyer, Mr. Geo. B. Gordon, has bought the sawmill property of Mr. Angus Millan.
Inducements were held out by western cattle and horse buyers to get George away from Sunderland. We are glad he is now a fixture here and hope prosperity may wait on him in his new venture.

Source.—The Presbyterians held their annual source last Tuesday evening and as annual soirce last Tuesday evening and as usual it was a grand success. Rev. W. Patterson of Cook's church, Toronto, gave a quaint lecture on "Scotch and Irish Reminiscences. It abounded with jokes and much good substantial words of wisdom. The choir acquitted themselves admirably. The tea was gotten up as only the ladies of the congregation can get up a tea. All known and unknown kinds of cake, etc., loaded the tables, and it seemed as if preparations had been made by our hospitable entertainers for fully a thousand people. Short, spicy addresses were given by Rev. Mr. McMillan of Wick and by the resident Short, spicy addresses were given by Rev. Mr. McMillan of Wick and by the resident ministers.
