The result of the recent Entrance examinations appear on our front page. While only 50 per cent. of those which wrote here succeeded in passing, Principal Holland of the Flesherton public school has the honor of passing ten out of a class of twelve which wrote, or 89 per cent., and one of the two unsuccessful ones did not write the last day of the examinations owing to a death in the family. Over the whole province the average which passed only amounted to about 50 per cent.

James Jelly of Shelburne met with a nasty experience at Eugenia on Sunday. He came up from Shelburne with his lage auto on Sunday and stopped at Eugenia. He had unwittingly left the power partially on. The result was the relegation of a good suit of clothes to the rag bag and a few bruises and sore muscles.

Coronation Procession

Exact Reproduction of Great Pageant at C. N. E. this year.

When the Coronation procession was trailing its glorious lengths through the streets of London and holding the breathless attention of the hundreds of thousands gathered from all parts of the world to witness its historical grandeur, a little group of Canada's leading citizens occupied one of the best stands. They were unanimously of the opinion that it was the most striking spectacle they had ever seen. When they were informed that it would be reproduced in every detail at the Canadian National Exhibition their enthusiasm was boundlesss. It touched their national pride that Canada possessed an institution of such magnitude that it could undertake the reproduction of the greatest procession of the twentieth century and of such reputation that the undertaking of it would mean its fulfilmeat to the last letter.

The Joke Hung Fire

A gentleman living in the suburbs is somewhat of a practical joker, and the other day he tried one on his wife that did not work out just as he had hoped for. It was this way. The gentleman informed his wife that he believed a lady had sent in an invitation for her to a rug hooking bee about half a mile away. Of course she donned her rug hooks and most fashionable gown and hied her away to help pull rags through canvas. The man of the house sat down to await developments, but they were slow in coming. Dinner time arrived and there were no potatoes boiled. However he got over that with a cold "snack." Then came supper time and still no madame put in an appearance. After supper there were the cows to milk, milk to strain, pigs to feed and about ten dozen eggs to gather. When the practical joker got through this ordeal it was bedtime and things looked serious. He hied away to a neighbor's and found that his wife had been there all day but left after supper. He went back home, hitched up the horse and buggy and started off to hunt up his stray partner. In this he was not successful, however, and after a weary search and rousing a number of people from their beds, he returned home only to find that the wanderer had returned a long time before and was sound asleep, while a gentle smile of satisfaction at a day of holy enjoyment still lingered around the corners of her mouth. All's well that ends well, but practical jokes will take a different form in that household hereafter.

Pounded the Wrong Pig.

A prominent citizen of this village has drawn upon his devoted head the happy he-haw of all who have heard the story, and the treat is on him all round. In fact he laughs over the thing now himself. One day last week he was working at the gravel pits with a gang of men when a black pig came along. Some discussion took place as to the propriety of putting the pig in pound. The aforesaid gentleman decided that the pig belonged to a certain neighbor and that it would be a good joke to put piggie in pound with a fifty cent penalty attached for the purpose of "setting 'em up." This he did forthwith. About half an hour afterwards the gentleman's wife came along and informed him that their pig had got out of its pen and she could not find. Yes, her husband knew where it was, alright. He had pounded his own pig without recognizing its porcine features. There was a sequel which we will not put in print. It would be too cruel. It is said that when the lady of that house wishes to have a little fun on the side she counts the baby's toes to the following adaptation of an old Mother Goose melody:

This little pig went to market
This little pig stayed around
This little pig left its pig sty
And later was found in the pound.

The Country Press.

The writer spent a two-days' outing with the members of the Canadian Press Association recently. To come in touch with these men and to gain an insight into their motives and reasons for engaging in the work of supplying the people of Canada with their daily and weekly supply of what the world is doing, enlarges ones vision and strengthens one's faith in his native land. Party politics may divide the men of the press, but nothing else will, and behind it all is a sincere devotion to duty and to their country's best interests. And in no section is this more forcibly shown than among those who edit and publish the country weeklies. For the most part these men receive little of this world's goods. They work early and late—result, the man in the country gets the news, both local and foreign, dished up to him in good form 52 times a year, and all for the sum of one dollar. In no other business on earth is so much value given for the money, a fact that the average reader does not fully appreciate. The country weekly editor coutinues in business just the same, and by so doing is making for the country's well being and prosperity. What would the small town be worth without its local paper? It would never be heard of beyond a small radius. People in the towns and cities and in the country as well sometimes forget how much they owe to the press of the day in the up-building of this land and in making its resources known abroad.—Canadian Farm.

The death of Mr. Thos. Bolen, an ex-reeve of Melancthon township, took place at Corbetton. Deceased, who was well known and highly respected, had been in poor health for over a year.

Publish My Letter, The World Over

The Words of Harold P. Bushy, Who Was Permanently Cured of Chronic Lumbago by "Nerviline."

"Three years ago I discovered that a man subject to lumbago might just as well be dead as alive." These words open the sincere, straightforward letter of H. P. Bushy, a well-known man in the plumbing and tinsmithing business in Portland.

"One attack came after another, and lumbago got to be a chronic thing with me. I could scarcely get in a day's work before that knifing, cruel pain would attack my back. I used a gallon of liniments; not one of them seemed penetrating enough to get at the core of the pain. I read in the Montreal Witness about Nerviline, and got five bottles. It is a wonderful medicine—I could feel its soothing pain-relieving action every time it was applied. When I got the disease under control with Nerviline, I built up my strength and fortified my blood by taking Ferrozone at meals. This treatment cured me permanently, and I urge everyone to give up the thick, white, oily liniments they are using, and try an up-to-date, penetrating, pain-destroyer like Nerviline.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Take notice that Mr. Silas Shunk, lately and for some time during the past in my employ as insurance agent, has ceased to do business for me since 1st May last. Since then I have been attending personally to same, and also intend doing so. Now that my time will not, in the future, be taken up with the mercantile or any other business besides my insurance, conveyancing, collecting and money lending, all of which will receive my personal and close attention, I trust to increase my business materially along these lines.

I give this notice that my many customers and the public may not be misled or deceived as I have been frequently told they have, believing Mr. Shunk still in my employ and doing business for me. Thanking the general public and my patrons in particular for liberal support in the past, and soliciting an increased continuance in future, I am your obedient servant,

—R. J. SPROULE, Flesherton.
