Indian Prince Stops To Dance

Seen here with his sister, the Princess of Baria, as he paused for the photographer in the middle of a dance, is the 30-year-old maharajah of Tripura, wealthy Indian potentate, who was visiting a Toronto night club during a world tour. After watching some "jitterbugs" in action, the maharajah joined the dance and displayed more than passing knowledge of the fox trot and rhumba. The Indian prince rules millions of subjects.

EXILED MONEY

There are millions upon millions of hidden Alberta money—hidden in banks outside Alberta. If that money were brought back and put to work, many of Alberta's present troubles would disappear. But the credit house threat against the banks will merely result in keeping that money out of Alberta—in chartered banks elsewhere. — Lethbridge Herald.

IMPERSONATION

Alice Roosevelt Longworth entertains her friends at private parties by doing an impersonation of Eleanor Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt learned of this, invited Alice to tea and said: "I hear you do a wonderful impersonation of me. Please do it for me." Mrs. Longworth wanted to oblige, but could not muster enough courage—because the impersonation is such a bitter one. And so she compromised. She gave Eleanor an impersonation of Mrs. Coolidge.—Leonard Lyons in New York Post.

USE OF THE DICTIONARY

In the course of study in English for Grades IX, X, and XI in Ontario schools, just issued, particular stress will be placed on the proper use of a dictionary. Teachers are instructed to interest their pupils in the study of words, so that the boys and girls will keep a dictionary handy while reading in order to find the proper spelling, pronunciation and meaning of every new term they run across in their books.

Awaken a proper interest in a boy or girl as to the use of a dictionary, and that interest seldom wanes. The study of a lexicon is not only useful, but to many people it is fascinating. It is not something that can be completed in a few months or even a few years. There are few, if any, mortals who know, offhand, the exact meaning of every word in the English language. There is always something new to learn.

The present instructions are good, but they are an admission of a laxity in this regard in the past. No boy or girl can become a real scholar without intensive and intelligent use of a dictionary.—Windsor Daily Star.

Reforestration In Hawaii

Sandalwood Trees To Grow Once More In The Hawaiian Isles

Sandalwood trees, whose burning wood has perfumed with incense the far-flung temples of the Orient since time immemorial, are on their way to becoming again a commercial product of the Hawaiian Islands. It was the glamorous lure of fortunes to be made in the sandalwood trade of the tropical islands of the Pacific that brought many Yankee clipper ships to the shores of those romantic archipelagos in the early part of the last century.

Forests Stripped Sometime Ago

So brisk was the business of cutting the trees and shipping the wood to China and other distant parts of the world that the forests were denuded of them long ago, with the exception of a scattered few stately reminders of the time when they were the supreme source of wealth to adventuresome traders.

Thousands of Seedlings Planted

In the recent reforesting of the Hawaiian Islands thousands of sandalwood seedlings have been planted and are flourishing. This program of restoring the valuable timber will be continued until the trees are as numerous as they were before their extermination began more than 100 years ago, Charles S. Judd, of Honolulu, territorial forester, said recently.

PRAYER, FAITH AND SINCERITY OF THE HEART
Mark 9:14-29

Golden Text: "All things are possible to him that believeth."—Mark 9:23.

Lesson Passage: Mark 9:14-29.

Run the straight race through God's good grace;
Lift up thine eyes, and seek His face.
Life with its path before us lies,
Christ is the way, and Christ the prize.

—John S. B. Monsell.

Some Rules of Christ's Teaching 14-16

Much of our conversation is in the form of questions and answers. Questions call forth answers. We may be either surprised that we know the answer or humiliated when we discover that we do not have the answer. The scribes questioned the disciples, but they did not have the answer. When Christ came down from the Mount of Transfiguration he asked the scribes why they were questioning the disciples. He was ready to give the answer the disciples could not give. All through his public ministry we see his unique power to satisfy seekers and give them bigger views of truth, duty and God. One of the basic rules of good teaching is always to try to give a satisfactory answer to a question, if not immediately, as soon as possible. Christian people who have had experience in dealing with religious difficulties should be prepared to answer honestly and effectively the questions that arise.

Christ did not regard his power as a monopoly. He sought to teach his disciples to do what he did. He even predicted that they would do greater works than himself. After the Day of Pentecost this predictio nwas fulfilled, but at the time of this incident the disciples had not learned the secret. The question is frequently asked, Why have we not Christ's healing power? It is beside the mark to answer that the medical profession carries on the work of the Great Physician. Christ gave a demonstration of the power of mind over body which his followers ought to be able to exercise in a greater degree than they now do. Progress is being made through a study of the laws of the mind, the power of faith, reaction to suggestion and the working of the human will. Right living, obedience to the will of God, earnest faith may be used to the benefit of our own health and in aid to sick people.

Prayer Becomes Real When Soul's Desire Expressed. 20-22.

Real prayer often begins through trouble. One very experienced observer of religious life states that in the majority of cases prayer is learned through trouble. Often we pray much more earnestly facing some acute issue affecting ourselves than we do for others in sorrow or difficulty. A very great scholar prayed all night for his boy whose life was hanging in the balance after an operation in a hospital. His prayer was born out of love to his boy and need of help rather than from a reasoned faith in prayer. The father of the epileptic boy told Jesus about the suffering of his lad and then with an outburst of tears said: "If Thou canst do anything, have compassion on us, and help us." Prayer becomes real when it expresses the soul's sincere desire. Prayer that is an art form, or rhetoric or scripture quotation may be beautiful, but effectual prayer is a matter of sincere and earnest desire. Our real prayer is what in our heart of hearts we are constantly desiring. This is what is controlling our action more than the words we say when we say our prayers. Answers to prayer become possible when we free ourselves of self-deception, the attempt to deceive others, or to deceive God.

Belief, 23-24

Christ asked for belief. He told the father of the sick boy that all things are possible to those who believe. Doubt paralyzes. Unbelief breaks the contact between the soul and God. One man who has reached great assurance of faith says that results follow with almost mathematical precision according to his faith. This father burst into tears and ejaculated: "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief." His words are descriptive of the faith of many religious people. They believe so far, and doubt beyond a given point. They believe at certain times and at other times are torn by grievous doubts. The secret of Christ's healing power was his unlimited faith in God.

Faith In Action, 25-29

Christ's faith was not a mood or a pose. It was a basis for action. He healed the sick boy. Emotion was never an end in itself with Christ. It was a spur to redemptive action. The disciples asked why they could not heal the boy and Christ told them that they lacked prayer and discipline. Christ had won his power to heal through faith, prayer and discipline. The Golden Text states, "All things are possible to him that believeth." Is this the secret of our weakness? Is it the explanation of the relative impotence of the Christian Church? Is apostolic power waiting for us as soon as we attain apostolic faith? "Wherever poverty, scikness. or any outward circumstance makes life hard social religion has its chance. It is social religion that founds hospitals, supports schools, fathers and cares for orphans, fights alcohol, demolishes slums, stands for economic justice for the oppressed, cultivates world friendship, seeks to supply a healthful social environment for all the brotherhood of man."

FIGHT BROADCASTS

What is claimed as the most extensive series of fight broadcasts ever undertaken has been arranged by the National Broadcasting Co., and Mike Jacobs, promoter of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club. The series starting this month will be presented over the coast to coast NBC Blue network. NBC Blue, incidentally, attained the "highest listener" rating ever reached by a single network with its broadcast of the title fight between Joe Louis and Tony Galento.

The entire Fall-Winter series of Madison Square Garden fights, and the championship bouts in every division will be covered in the series which will be inaugurated with the Henry Armstrong - Lou Ambers lightweight title contest at Yankee Stadium, New York, on Tuesday, August 22nd. At least sixteen major encounters will be broadcast from the Garden, beginning with the middleweight contest between Fred Apostoli and Ceferina Garcia on September 12th.

Sam Taub and Bill Stern will be in charge of the broadcasts and will handle the ringside assignments.. Taub will do the blow-by-blow descriptions while Stern will comment between the rounds.

Among the outstanding contests to be broadcast will be the return match between the world's heavyweight champion, Joe Louis, and Bob Pastor, who went the full limit with Louis in their last meeting. The series is also expected to include a heavyweight bout between Tony Galento and Lou Nova, who recently beat former champion Max Baer. Complete details will be announced in the near future when the schedule is completed.
