THIRKELL & PERRIN.

Lindsay, Oct. 1, 1870.

The Brooklyn Union is highly complimentary to Lady Lisgar on her recent visit to New York. It says she is "one of the most beautiful and cultivated ladies in society. Her graceful and unaffected manners charm all who have the pleasure of meeting her."

Sir John Lubbock states that among many races a woman is absolutely forbidden to speak to, or even look at, her son-in-law, or in anywise to meddle in his affairs; and yet, almost in the same breath, he vaunts the superior capacity for civilization of the Caucasian family!

A BEAUTIFUL SMILE.—In a recent trial in Buffalo, Mr. Dorsheimer, who was retained for the plaintiff, gave utterance in addressing the jury to a little passage of eloquence so pure that we are tempted to tear it from its connections and give it place in our columns, simply for its beauty's sake. The learned counsel was rebutting the proposition of his opponent that it is the duty of the press to hold up to view the improprieties of public and private citizens, when he said:—"Gentlemen, these sentiments filled my mind as I walked down the street during the recess of the court. While thus engaged, my eyes were drawn to the beautiful church which the piety of our townsmen has built in the midst of our noise and business. And surely a more graceful object never rested under human eyes. For a score of vines have spread upon it, covering board foundation stone, and wall, and buttress, even to the [illegible] more beautiful than the tracery of the pencil can describe. As I looked at it I beheld a simile not inapt to this discussion. I saw that those vines—which are indeed but the parasites of vegetation and hostile to the nobler growths of the forest—had become the very ornament of the stately building, hiding, without doubt, many a dark stain as deep cavities which the storm and the winter have worked in those massive walls. May it not be that a generous Providence has intended the kindly thought of our neighbors to do for us the offices which the woodbine and the ivy have done for yonder church, covering the frailties of our poor human nature with the beautiful robes of charity. Is it possible, gentlemen, that upon any one has been imposed the cruel duty to tear away these friendly veils, and leave their imperfections bare to every mocking eye? Are there among us divinely appointed torturers of the heart and executioners of the soul? No. The wrath Divine, in its great compass, has never inflicted upon any creature a degradation like this—certainly not upon the ministers of a free and enlightened press."

Economy and comfort are at once secured by the use of Johnston's Patent Weather Protectors. Composed of the best quality of vulcanized rubber, firmly held by metallic binding, they render doors and windows perfectly air-tight. They were awarded an extra prize at the Provincial Exhibition, 1869. Try them—they are cheap and warranted for five years. We want five agents, who are business men. Address, J. Johnston & Co., Lindsay, Ont.
