During your sojourn among us we have ever found you kind and hospitable neighbors, but as words are inadequate to express our feelings of appreciation and respect, we ask you to accept these parlor chairs. Our earnest wish is that health, happiness and prosperity will attend you in your new home, and that success will crown your every effort. Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors—Hugh Smith, Thompson Allen, Robert McMullen.

While sorry to part with you and Mrs. Saigeon we wish you happiness and prosperity in your new home in the West, and if we should not be permitted to meet again in this world we hope and pray that it may be our happy lot to meet in that better land where parting is unknown. Cured By an Angel

London is interested in the case of Dorothy Kerin of Herne Hill, a short distance from London, who claims that she has been restored to health and regained her hearing and sight as the result of an angel's visit. She has now been removed to the residence of Dr. Ash, a nerve specialist, in order to enable a study to be made of her case and to get her away from the crowds which have been visiting her home, after the people had learned of the angel's visit. The girl claims that she saw a vision of a flame and heard a voice saying, "Thy sufferings are over," and that she was able to get up and walk. Miss Kerin, who is 22 years old, has been bedridden for five years with a mild attack of tuberculosis. Recently she became blind and deaf. She now sees and hears and is able to stand up. Many physicians who examined her case are inclined to the opinion that the cure was effected by auto-suggestion through her intense emotional state, and that this caused the vision. Her account of the angelic vision which restored her senses and relieved her pain is ascribed to hysteria by skeptics, but the facts of the recovery are beyond dispute.

Premier Borden stated that the naval act would be repealed.

Walkerton

Euroth Greenhow, who was sent up for trial by Magistrate James Tolton on the charge of stealing a scarf from the home of Mr. Walter Booth, barber, was acquitted by Judge Barrett on Monday morning last. After hearing the evidence adduced, the Judge found the accused not guilty and dismissed the case.

Previous to his removal last week to the London Asylum a lunatic undertook to starve himself in the Walkerton jail and there is some reason for believing that he might have succeeded had it not been for the ingenuity of the jail surgeon, Dr. Sinclair. But the doctor sprung a new trick on the prisoner and made his repasts of the sumptuous and belt expanding kind whether his inclinations or appetite pointed that way or not. Inserting a large spool between the man's teeth, the doctor left him biting savagely on the wood while he slipped a long rubber tube through the hole in the spool and down the man's throat, leaving one end anchored in his stomach and the other end protruding from his face. Putting a funnel on the protruding end he started to pour in soup and other victuals and this operation was continued until the meal was concluded. One quart at each feeding was thus administered and in looking up our physiology we find that this is the actual capacity of the human stomach, so there wasn't any space vacant when the doctor finished. And the man's shadow got bigger under the treatment and the prisoner was at least in good condition physically, if not mentally, when he left. The doctor has forwarded a couple of his spools, with proper directions for use, to the Halloway jail in England, where the imprisoned suffragettes undertook to starve themselves. No more will woman-righters be liberated there because they can't be fed.—Bruce Times.

A Letter From England

Rough House, Asby, Feb. 18, 1912.

After landing in England all made a rush to get through the inspection of luggage. As I had only a suit case I went to the Inspector and opened it. He just put in his hand and said, "No tobacco, I suppose." I said I did not touch the dirty stuff. He put his mark on it and I bade a few of my travelling companions good-bye, not likely to see them again. I then made for Lime street station, where I got my ticket and a morning paper to read until train time. Some four or five men got in the same compartment with me at the first stop. A young lady about thirty years of age also got on. She said the reason she took our car was because it went through without change. She was a charming talker. I told the young lady that the Canadian car was better than the English—more ventilation and pleasanter to travel in. When she learned I was from Canada she wished me to tell her what was the cause of the great turn-over in the recent Canadian election. I told her it was the reciprocity question, that people were afraid it would lead to annexation. She was an interesting person to travel with. When she got off we shook hands and parted, never to meet again. Such is life in travelling. I made many pleasant acquaintances by the time I reached my destination.

With the exception of the first four days of February the winter has been mild. I saw snowdrops out in bloom the last of January in a shady place, but the frost put a check to the growth. When it reached seven below zero on Feb. 4 the natives here thought it was awfully cold weather—a record breaker. The weather is like spring at present. Grass is growing and farmers are spreading manure on the meadows that they drew out during the hard frost. The farmers don't plow much here now, hence putting the manure on old meadows that were never ploughed. A good deal of Indian corn and oil cake is used. My brother farms seventy acres and does not plow a furrow. He kept thirty head of cattle up to last week, when he sold three 2-year-old steers this spring for $47.50 each. He also buys turnips. A strange way to farm, you say, but he is doing well. He has some cows coming in in the fall, when they sell well. Then he has sold as high as $101 each, and his last summer's calves have never been outside yet. He has fifty sheep.

Well, Mr. Editor, I am pleased to get your paper. It comes to me a welcome visitor on Mondays. I am sorry to learn of so many deaths in my neighborhood in so short a time. The snowdrops are in full bloom now and the honeysuckle is coming out in leaf. I enclose one of each for you. Yours sincerely.

—JOHN COULTHARD.
