HOW TO WASH LINEN SUITS.

An Expert Laundress Describes the Best Method.

"For washing linen suits," said an expert laundress, "use only the best white soap and never rub the soap on the cloth unless there is a lot of hard dirt to be taken out. In the majority of cases the suits soak for an hour or so in soapy water, putting them in when the water is quite hot. By the time it is cool enough to permit washing freely the soiled parts are sufficiently soft to admit of cleaning without very much scrubbing. Rinse in several waters, always until the last water is perfectly clear, then pass the garment through the stiffening water, after which it is pressed as dry as possible in the cotton sheet.

"Some stiffening is necessary to give the linen the appearance of freshness which it has when it comes to you from the tailor. On the other hand, the greatest care should be taken not to have too much stiffening. That ruins the appearance of what would otherwise be a perfectly washed suit. You want just enough to give the linen body and yet not take away from its suppleness.

"In washing colored linens, excepting tans and browns, color all the waters and try always to avoid putting soap on colored linen, and also do not use water hotter than blood heat, allowing the linen to soak only a few minutes before washing it out and putting it in a second water of the same temperature and colored. Three waters are generally enough for a colored linen suit. Where the suit is not much soiled two will be enough. The stiffening water must be colored just as was that in which the washing and rinsing was done.

"After wringing in the cotton sheet care must be taken in hanging both coats and skirts for the drying process. Fresh air for colored linen and sun for the white—that is the ideal drying process. House drying never gives the satisfaction that a good laundress wants for her work. Steam drying should be a last resort. It injures the texture of the goods and leaves the colors less brilliant.

"The figures on which suits get their final shaping are the kind used by good dressmakers and tailors. I have all sizes and covered so that the suits get as nearly as possible the shape of their owners. I keep the figures arrayed in fresh petticoats and shirt waists, and when the freshly washed suits are on them I'm not ashamed for any one to walk into my shaping rooms. Each suit is taken from the figure and placed in its box for shipment. Great care is taken to see that every part of it is perfectly dry."

Superstition.

"For downright idiotic, superstitious, weak-minded, gullible credulity," growled Judkins, "recommend me to a woman! Gave away a pair of my trousers to a peddler to charm warts off the children's hands! Madam, are you aware that this is the twentieth century and not the middle ages?"

"It does seem a little silly," said Mrs. Judkins mildly, "but I've heard of such things being done. You know those trousers, John, were the pair you tore on the lawn mower the other day and threw aside."

"It's not the trousers, madam; it's the childish, imbecile, fatuous puerility of the thing. Besides, I left a hare's foot in one of those pockets, madam, that I've carried for rheumatism the past three years."—London Tit-Bits.

Epigrams In Japan.

The Japanese are great admirers of epigrams and apt phrases. Their love of such things is carried so far that when a guest says something unusually brilliant the host or hostess will beg him to write down his remark in large ornamental script. The sentence is then mounted and hung on the wall as a permanent addition to its ornaments, much as in England we should hang up a text or motto. Naturally the author of a bonmot treated in this way feels himself highly honored to be thus placed on record. But the sentences are selected more for their wisdom than their humor, so that the funny man is not much in evidence.

Rats and Eggs.

No single point better illustrates the sagacity of the rat, according to an article in McClure's, than the way in which it eats an egg. It bites through the shell and chips off small fragments as neatly as a squirrel opens a nut, consumes the entire contents without spilling a drop and then sits up and licks itself clean like a cat. Rats will steal the eggs from under a sitting hen. In one case they carried off seventy-five dozen eggs which a commission merchant had incautiously stored in a wooden tub.

Enthusiasm.

Nothing is so contagious as enthusiasm. It is the real allegory of the tale of Orpheus; it moves stones; it charms brutes. Enthusiasm is the genius of sincerity, and truth accomplishes no victories without it.—Bulwer.

Careless of Her.

"You look annoyed. What's the matter?"

"Bertha told me a secret the other day and I can't tell you what it is."

"Why not?"

"I've forgotten it."

Lacking In Experience.

Maude—What is the luckiest day to be born on?

Claude—Don't know. Only tried one.—Illustrated Bits.

Crowded London.

There are 900,000 Londoners who are living two or more in a room, while there are 26,000 who are crowded six into a room.

Mostly Women.

According to the official return, no fewer than 42,676 of the 60,508 old-age pensioners in the County of London are women.

A Prosperous Phone Co.

The East Luther Telephone Co., Ltd., have just issued from the Grand Valley Star office a 28-page directory of subscribers on their line and also those on the Amaranth Association's and Dr. Berwick's lines, both of which have working connections with the East Luther Co's line. During the ten years this company has been in existence it has grown from an affair of a dozen phones to a big institution having about 200 phones. The company practically covers East Luther township and still there are more applications for phones to be considered. The directors are busy on a plan to improve the service by giving each switching office direct connection with Grand Valley. This will increase the efficiency of the service at least one half and will be worth the investment. Farmers are finding phones an immense convenience, and an almost indispensable necessity around the place. They are right in touch with the market, the doctor, the implement man, the railways, and are saved many a trip by using the local phones. Farm life loses much of its monotony when the news of the neighborhood can be learned over the line and the people put right in touch with their business centres.

W. A. Fenwick, formerly of Shelburne, is out of his mind at Sturgeon Falls, and is now confined in the jail there. He opened a watch repairing shop there and lately has acted strange as he did before leaving Shelburne. He has the front of his shop decorated with brooms and saws and the windows pasted over with quotations from Shakespeare and the Bible. The Oddfellows are looking after him and have written Strathcona lodge, Shelburne to get instructions what to do with him. He is not dangerous.—Shelburne Free Press.

Mr. Joe O'Connell's grey hound met a tragic death the other day. The poor brute followed its master out to his farm at the corner of Sligo and London Roads, but not being used to the dangers of farm life, the animal got in front of the mower at work in the hay field and the knives of the machine caught the dog's legs, cutting them so severely that it was shot to end its misery.—Mt. Forest Rep.

Mrs. Wm. Sparrow of Mt. Forest leaned against a porch railing, which gave way. She sustained a fracture of both arms and a dislocation of both wrists.

Mr. Clair Brink, son of postmaster Brink of Teeswater, has been appointed surgeon to the Arctic expedition, being sent out by the Canadian government, under the direction of Prof. Jackson of Toronto University.—Telescope.

Clara, the little 2-year-old daughter of Baker Rowe, was critically ill Monday, but is now happily out of danger. She had got hold of a box of matches and had sucked the sulphur off and bitten quite a number when her mother, coming in the room, noticed it and her sickly appearance and at once sent for the doctor. For some time she was seriously ill and two doctors were in consultation, but action had been taken in time and she rallied rapidly.—Durham Review.

On Sunday last the barn belonging to Mr. W. Boyd, 7th line, was struck by lightning and narrowly escaped destruction. A bird's nest that had been built under the eavetrough was set afire and fell into the hay mow, but fortunately, Mrs. Boyd happened to be looking out of the window at the time and saw the blaze when the bolt struck the barn. Calling her husband they manged to stamp out the blaze before it had taken hold of the hay and make headway. The fact that the hay in the mow was still somewhat green was all that saved the building, as it kept the blaze smouldering until they were able to get water.—Mirror

Mr. Frank Oberle, a well-known general merchant at Formosa, was drowned at that place in a small pond while bathing. He and Mr. Schnurr, hotelman, were in cooling off, and through some cause as yet unexplained Mr. Oberle sank to his death. One cause given is that he became exhausted in rescuing his comrade from danger. The body was recovered in a depth of about eight feet of water. He was a married man and leaves a widow and seven children. He was 38 years of age. He has a brother, Andrew, in business in Walkerton.

Mr. Lucas and Telephones

That the matter of puplic regulation or ownership of telephone companies in Ontario is engaging the attention of the Provincial Government, and will possibly come before the Legislature at its next session, is indicated by the brief statement of Sir James Whitney, when interviwed yesterday, that Hon. I. B. Lucas will spend some time in studying the situation in Britain on behalf of Ontario Government this summer.

Hon. Mr. Lucas is now on the ocean en route to England. His first mission is to represent Ontario at the International School Congress, and Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, stated to The Globe yesterday that the Minister would also extend to the Congress, on behalf of Government, an urgent invitation to hold next year's Congress in the capital of Ontario. Should Toronto secure this important international educational conference, the Minister of Education believes the Province would reap material benefits.

The second commission of the absent Minister is to be undertaken on the suggestion of the Premier. Sir James Whitney's attention was first directed to the British telephone system when he was last in England, and it is understood that he looked into the situation and conditions with some thoroughness. Within the past few months the British Postoffice Department has decided to take over the telephone service and develop it upon similiar lines of public ownership to the telegraphic services.

In view of these important changes in the old country, and the fact that Hon. Mr. Lucas will be on the ground the Provincial Premier has asked him to conduct an extended investigation, in which he will have assurance of co-operation and assistance from the British Postal Department. Mr. Lucas, it will be remembered, has devoted considerable time and study to the telephone situation in Ontario, and was the chairman of the special Legislative committee which conducted an enquiry on the problem of rural telephones in Ontario.—Globe.

If any man ever had a narrow escape, says the Collingwood Enterprise, it is Mr. Tom Hoy, and he is fortunate to be able to be still walking around. Mr. Hoy was sitting in his office at the Charlton Sawmill Co's plant Tuesday afternoon during the height of the electric storm, when a bolt of lightning clove through the roof of the building, hurling stovepipes to all quarters of the room and fused the top of the stove. Mr. Hoy was sitting with one leg crossed over the other, and to this fortunate incident he owes his life. The lightning, after working its will on the stove, tore off the heel of Mr. Hoy's right boot, making a hole also in his sock and heel. Tom was stunned for some time, and Dr. McKay had to be summoned. The Dr. stated that had both his feet been on the ground he must inevitably have been killed; but as it was, he is practically now quite recovered.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT AT HANOVER

Not for a long while has a factory accident occurred here of so distressing a nature and which has so touched the sympathies of the townspeople at large as did the one that befell Freddy Zinn, at the Spiez Furniture Co's factory on Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Freddy who is a school boy was working in the factory like so many of the boys during the holidays. He was engaged "taking away" from the tennoning machine which was being fed by Arthur Ellis Jr. In some manner he got his left hand in the revolving knives—just how no one except the boy himself knows—and as they work inward his arm wss drawn relentlessly in and he was unable to extricate it until the greater part of the arm was gone. No one saw the accident, and the lad walked some 20 feet across the factory floor to where another employes Bert Eby was engaged. When he saw the boy's condition he was staggered but recovering hastily tied a handkerchief around the arm above the wound. Mr. Ellis who was reaching for a board at the moment the accident happened did not know of it until it was all over. The lad was driven to Dr. Taylor's office where Dr. Taylor, assisted by Dr. Eede, dressed the wound. The poor boy has lost his arm near the shoulder. The utmost sympathy is felt here for the boy and parents. Mr. Peter Zinn, a traveller for the firm, was at Owen Sound en route to the Soo when he was notified of the sad event. He was brought home by Mr. Fred Deutschmann in his auto. While the boy suffers a great deal, he stood the shock exceptionally well and his recovery is looked for.—Post.

Young Bride Drowned

Mrs. John Campbell, whose husband keeps a summer hotel at Copperhead island, Georgian Bay, was drowned recently. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were married just one month and two days prior to her death, and their married life was apparently a happy one. Mr. John Campbell, the husband, has resided on Copperhead Island for the past twenty two years, and is of a kindly disposition, so that it could not be that domestic trouble led to the sad drowning of the wife. Very early on the morning of Monday, June 25, Mrs. Campbell got out of bed and went out the house, and that was the last seen of her until her body was found on Monday.

Coroner Dr. Limbet, of Parry Sound went to Copperhead Island and held an investigation and decided that the death was accidental, the lady having walked or fallen off the dock. The body was taken to Midland on the steamer Waubic for interment. Mrs. Campbell was an Old Country girl, under 30 years of age. Her husband is past middle age.
