Meaford is "It"

In the case of Johnston vs. The Georgian Bay Milling Company, the town of Meaford and Clark and Sons, contractors at the Assizesi n Owen Sound, judgement was resevered, but the Geergian Bay Milling and Power Company was exonerated. The jury in their finding implicated the town of Meaford and Clark and Sons, but found no negligence on the Power Co. The amount of damages to be paid is $500 and the decision as to who should pay it as well as the costs was left to His Lordship. It appears that the town of Meaford will be held responible as Clark and Sons, the contractors, were in the town's employ at the time the accident occurred. Several knotty points of law arose and the judge reserved his decision.

Some Walkerton Cases

Several interesting cases were tried at the Walkerton Assizes recently, reported by the Herald and Times.

An action was brought by Valentine Gerbracht and his wife Catherine Gerbracht of Ayton to recover $10,000 damages from Dr. Geo Bingham, the eminent surgeon of Toronto, and Dr. Easton of Ayton, for alleged negligence. The plaintiffs claimed that on June 22nd, 1910, an operation was performed by defendants on the said Catherine Gerbracht and an incision made in her back into which was inserted a quantity of absorbent cotton wrapped in gauze. The wound was alleged to have been subsequently closed and a quantity of the absorebent cotton left in her body. It was claimed that as a result of this she suffered such intense pain and agony that she was unable to perform her household duties. On or about June 20th, 1912, Dr. Easton is alleged to have removed from her body some cotton and gauze which was claimed to have been in there since the first operation nearly two years before. It was further alleged that after the removal of the cotton she made rapid recovery and is now able to attend her household duties. The plaintiffs asked $10,000 damages. The case was settled, however, between the parties upon terms mutually satisfactory to those concerned, and the charge of negligence was withdrawn.

Richard Acton, a farmer of Greenock, gave a stallion and two promissory notes of $100 each to Wm. Colquhoun of Mitchell in exchange for another stallion named "Hambury," which Colhoun is said to have warranted as sound. "Hambury," however, was found to be badly diseased in the head, and eventually died on Acton's hands. The latter thereupon entered suit against Colquhoun for $1200 damages and return of the notes for alleged breach of warrantry. The Court ordered Coulquhoun to pay plaintiff $200 damages, return him the notes and pay county court costs.
