The Queen Pawned Rer Jeweis.

Queen Isobelle of Spain, pawned her jeweis to raise money to fit out the expedition that discovered the new world. Her sacrifice was not greater than is made by many women of America, who deay themselves many things in order to have money to buy Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for their stee husbands or children. This "Discovery" is more important to them, than the one made in 1492. For all diseases of the lange, lives, throat or stomach, the "Discovery" is a sovereign remedy. A trial convinces, its continued use ourse. It purifies the blood, invigorates the liver and strengthens and builts up the whole system. Guaranteed to benefit or once in every case, or money paid for it returned.

Ment of Spain, pawned her jewels all here; show them and prove your statements." No such cheques are in existence, as Murphy had to admit.

Regarding another payment he had stated, as Mr. Oaler read, that there would be an entry in the books to show it. Now, he was given the books and told to go shead. Usual results.

At this point came, with one exception, the most dramatic moidest of the day. Taking up the subject of the sower at the south wall contract, in which a change of level had been made, Mr. Oaler had Murphy detail how he had gone to Hon. Thomas MoGroevy and had interested

The Tarte Investigation.

Wednesday, July 8th, 1891.

From the time Owen E. Murphy took the stand Tuesday morning until he fell over on the chairman in a swoon under the exceptating cross-examination of E. B. Oeler, there was scarcely a moment that was not full of excitement. The developmente in the case were startling, to may the least, and go far to prove the contention laid down by counsel yesterday. To day Murphy had not the blotter and hank-book as an excuse. He had to face the music and he weit all to pieces in the most pitiable fashion.

Mr. Tartr's Injustice.

"Ie that your handwriting?" thundered Mr.

Osler.

Murphy gasped out a half denial.

"Answer the question, man," shouled !

"tired." Two-thirds of the drinking done, two-thirds of the money spent for drinks, two-thirds of the resulting wretchedness, are due to the treating system. Men take drink after drink that they do not want, and spend money to pay for drinks for other people, oftentimes men they hardly know or perhaps dislike. Furthermore, the custom, looked at in the proper way, is degrading and unmanly. It assists in forming bad sesociations, habits of "loafing around," and precludes a person from his most sacred privilege—that of choosing his own associations.

Mr. Ceter threw the book upon the table with a bang. "Explain that as you like, sir,"

"That I can't tell," was Murphy's significant answer to the first question put to him this morning. But thet racket would not work to-day. Yesterday it all depended upon the blotter; to-day the blotter; to-day the blotter; to-day the blotter was on the table, but he absociately refused to look tato it. Mr. Otter took the winess in hand promptly and instantly there was a howl of Grit interruptions that the chairman stevaly suppressed. To hear some of the Opposition one would think that this degraded man, this a)-ject pitiful creature who is to-night left without a shred or patch of reputation, is in the habit of being wrapped up in cotton wool and kept under a glass one. But interruptione and perversions and evasions were of so use to-day. Mr. Otter meant business, and business is was, right from the start.

ONE REASON FOR DRINKING.—The custom of treating, says an exchange, is one of the most pernicious and foolish that ever cursed society, and its abolishment, if it were practicable, would be one of the greatest of boons. The custom is said to have originated in the primitive days of the nation, when the settlers had to resort to the mutual help plan, and when the neighbors gathered for a harn-raising or a log-rolling the host "set up" for the boys, and upon a milar occasions the compliment was returned; but whatever its origin, it is distinctively an American custom. In no other country do men stand up to a a bar and buy drinks alter, nately for each o'her until both become "tired." Two-thirds of the money spent for drinks, two-thirds of the reculting wretcheduess, are due to the treating system. Men
