Walkerton

While attempting to board a hand-car heavily loaded with earth on the C. P. R. track near the Bobbin Factory about 7.30 o'clock on Saturday morning last, David Higgins, boss carpenter at the new railway bridge here, had the misfortune to slip and fall under the wheels of the car, which passed over his left leg, crushing it against the rail and breaking it in two places below the knee. The injured man was at once hurried to the hospital, and Dr. Fraser, the C. P. R. physician summoned. At first it was feared that amputation of the injured limb would be necessary, but at last reports the fractures had been set and hopes were entertained of saving the leg.

The going into effect of Local Option in Kincardince to-day and the consequent banishment of booze from the scenery there leaves Walkerton and vicinity standing out conspicuously as the wet territory on the map of Bruce. How the county as a whole is drying up may be gathered from the fact that in 1874 there were issued in Bruce no less than 180 tavern and 20 shop licenses, as against 24 tavern and no shop licenses for 1913, the last liquor store and the station hotel being doomed to shortly vanish from the landscape here. Of the 24 licenses that will thus be issued in the county for 1913, it is probably singular that 20 of these should be granted for Walkerton and immediate vicinity.

As a result of the auto mishap near Dunkeld on Friday last in which Mr. Dan Connor of Eden Grove was killed and Mr. Robt Hunter of Kincardine was painfully injured, it is reported that an action for damages is threatened against the township of Brant, for alleged neglect in failing to repair the washout on the road, and which it is claimed was directly responsible for the accident.—Herald and Times.

Mrs. S. Henderson left for Orangeville this week, to visit her brother, who is seriously ill.

We are waiting patiently to see responses to the article "Nagging" occurring in last week's Durham Chronicle. The article on nagging is a gem, but why use this with particular reference to Ceylon's murder?

The tragedy in which Captain Scott lost his life gives a new point to the question as to whether these Polar expeditions are really worth while. Captain Amundsen, the man who first reached the South Pole, in an article in the New York Independent, says there is no life of any kind in that desolate region, either in the air, water or land. In fact animal life, so far as he had observed, does occur at any place within 700 miles of the pole. Neither are there apparently, any natural resources in that desolate region. Capt. Amundsen said he found no evidence of the presence of gold, silver, copper or iron. Even if there were such the resources would be so inaccessible that nothing could be made of them as miners could not live there, and if life were possible there would be no way of getting the products to market. The lowest temperature Amundsen found around the Pole was 75 degrees below zero. Not only is there intense cold there, but it is a region of violent storms as well.

His horse becoming unmanageable in the dark, Allan Cameron of the Central Hotel was thrown from his buggy and sustained severe injuries on Saturday night. In company with George Shiers he was driving on Lambton street east of the town towards his home when the horse became frisky and both men endeavored to leave the vehicle. Mr. Shiers had cleared successfully and his companion was in the act of doing so, when the animal gave a lurch and he was tossed to the roadside. Mr. Cameron was picked up by passersby and taken home where medical attendance was rendered by Dr. Jamieson. On examination it was found that a shoulder was dislocated, a rib broken and that he had received a scalp wound in addition to a severe shaking up. Latest reports announce that he is making progress towards recovery.

John Noble, employed at the Furniture company saw-mill, sustained severe injuries to his left arm, a small scalp wound and a severe shaking up, as well as having the clothes torn from his body into shreds as a result of an accident while at work on Monday afternoon. Mr. Noble was about to replace a bebt on the pulley connected to a bolting machine in the mill, when the sleeve of his shirt caught in a revolving screw. He was unable to remove his arm and the screw wound his clothes around in a ball. Mr. Noble was rapidly caught in the meshes of the belt, hauled ceilingwards and was pitched between the shafting and the ceiling onto a pile of sawdust on the far side of the machine. His shirt, vest and overalls had been torn from his body and were cut into ribbons. Employees assisted and secured his other garments. While still suffering to some extent from the accident, from which he considers he escaped miraculously. Mr. Noble is recovering quickly and expects to be able to return to work within a week's time. He recently came from New Ontario and is residing with his mother, Mrs. John Noble, Sr., in upper town.—Review

Pure Bred Male Animals

Realizing that inability to secure the use of well-bred male animals is at the present time one of the greatest difficulties standing in the way of live stock development in many parts of Canada, particularly in the newly settled districts, the Dominion Department of Agriculture, through the Live Stock Branch, is this year undertaking a widespread distribution of pure bred stallions, bulls, rams and boars. The original cost of the animals will be borne by the Department and they will be placed in the hands of such local organizations as agree to the conditions governing the distribution. In a word these sires will remain the property of the Department, but the local associations will be responsible for their proper maintenance and management under the general supervision of Officers of the Live Stock Branch. In the case of stallions, the members of the associations will also be required to pay a fee covering an annual insurance premium.

All animals distributed will be bought from home breeders and will be Canadian bred. As far as possible, they will be purchased in the province in which they are to be placed. In this way Canadian breeders will receive encouragement and their market will be increased not only directly but also indirectly through the emphasis given throughout the country to the value of pure bred sires. It may be added that it is not the intention to place the animals in districts where suitable male animals of the same class are already owned by private individuals. The aim is rather to aid sections where pure bred sires are lacking and as well to encourage new communities in following a proper and intelligent system in breeding.

All bulls distributed will be purchased subject to the tuberculin test and only stallions which have passed a rigid veterinary inspection for soundness will be selected.

In order to take advantage of this form of assistance, it will be necessary for interested parties, in any section, to undertake the organiztion of a local association in whose hands such sires as are required may be placed. Complete information regarding the rules and regulations governing the distribution may be had upon applications to the Live Stock Commissioner, Ottawa. Whenever possible, an Officer of the Branch will render assistance in the perfecting of the necessary local organization.
