Walkerton

Provincial detective Reburn of Toronto is here this week investigating the incendiary fires which occurred at the Queen's hotel last week.

Last week we reported two incendiary fires which occurred at the Queen's hotel during Tuesday evening. Shortly after going to press on Wednesday a report of another blaze reached us. This time the fire was in the cellar of the hotel, but as on the two former occasions was discovered and extinguished before any damage was done. Since then there have been no further attempts to set fire to that building or any other in town and the citizens are beginning to breath freely once more.—Telescope.

Killed at Riverview

A fatal accident took place at Riverview Tuesday forenoon, resulting in the death of an old resident in the person of Mr. Robt. Nixon. The accident happened between 8 and 9 o'clock. Mr. Nixon was engaged drawing in grain, and was taking off the load with slings in the barn. He was in some way knocked off the rear of the wagon by a bundle in the slings, lighting on the barn floor on his neck and shoulders with great force. When John McIntosh, who was working with him, reached him, he found that he was completely paralyzed from the neck down. Dr. Smith, who was at once summoned from Shelburne, found that his back had been broken high up between the shoulders. The injured man succumbed to his injuries about 9.30 p. m. He was conscious until nearly the last but had no control of his muscles. Deceased was in his 69th year.—Economist.

We congratulate Miss Marion Gun, who has been accepted as a member of Dr. Vogt's choir, better known as The Mendelssohn Choir, and organized generally as the greatest musical organization on the continent. It is always a pleasure to learn of the literary or musical achievements of our young people, and as Dr. Vogt accepts nothing but high-class talent, her acceptance as a member of this world-renowned musical organization is the strongest testimony we can give of Miss Gun's ability.

On Saturday evening last, while Mr. and Mrs. James Tucker and daughter, of Egremont, were driving to town in a buggy, the horse took fright at a gypsy camp alongside the road about a mile out of town. The horse became unmanageable, upset the buggy and pitched the occupants out on the hard road, inflicting serious injuries to Mrs. Tucker, whose leg was badly bruised and required medical attendance. Miss Tucker's knee was injured to some extent, but not seriously, and Mr. Tucker, who fared better than the others, escaped with slight injury to one of his arms. The horse continued his race till stopped at the entrance of the town, this side of the C. P.R. bridge. The buggy and harness were badly used up, and other means had to be procured for the return trip. This is a case where we think the township council could be held responsible for allowing such an outfit to camp near a public highway.—Durham Chronicle.

John McCannell, Inglewood, threshed 225 bushels of alsike off 37 acres. He sold the entire crop at $8 a bushel, realizing $1,800.

Rats Move Westward

It is interesting to note the slow but steady immigration of the rat westward. A few years ago the citizens of Fort William were shocked to find a colony of rats in their midst. About a year later they were found in Winnipeg. Now we read in a Western paper that while removing an oat stack on his farm near Carman, Wilson Roblin discovered a large colony of rats. With the aid of pitchforks Mr. Roblin and his hired man were able to kill eighty six. This paper says as Carman is 50 miles west of Winnipeg this is conclusive evidence that unless drastic and determined effort is made to extirminate them it will be but a short time until this pest spreads over all Western Canada.

Youthful Walkerton Firebug

Walkerton, Aug. 28.—Wesley Russell, 18 years of age, a grandson of Constable Russell, of Walkerton, was arrested at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Provincial detectective Reburn charged with setting fire to the stables and barns of the Hartley Hotel on August 11, and to the Queen's Hotel on August 18 and 19. Russell was lodged in the Walkerton jail, and after an examination by the detective confessed to having started the Hartley fire, but denied all knowledge of the fires at the Queen's Hotel.

For the past month Walkerton has been in a state of fear owing to the numerous incendiary fires throughout the town. The most serious of these was the Hartley fire, when, on Monday, August 11, the stables and barns of the hotel were entirely destroyed. On Monday, August 18, two attempts were made to set fire to the Queen's Hotel, and the following day another attempt was made. All, however, were discovered before the flames could gain any headway.

The local police were unable to find any clue to the perpetrator, and finally the people of the town asked Crown Attorney Dickson to place a man on the case. He notified the Attorney-General, who detailed Detective Reburn on the case, and the result was the arrest of Russell to-day. The detective is not satisfied that Russell was the only pyromaniac, and is still working on the case, and expects to make another arrest shortly.

Russell, who claims to have no motive for the crime, told the detective that he went up into the loft of Hartley's stable and threw a lighted match into the hay. As soon as the hay caught fire he ran away.
