CENTRE LINE

The past week has been cold and damp, with some hard frosts at night. Very little work was done on the land.

Tpr. Victor Osborne, who is on guard duty at Niagara, was home for a short time at the week end.

Mr. Stanley Little has rented the house on his farm to Mr. and Mrs. Leo Blakey, who moved in last week.

Mr. Bob Nicholls is assisting Mr. Luther Love with his farm work for the summer.

Mr. Jack Arnott of the O.A.C. at Guelph is spending a few days at his home here.

Mr. Garfield Lyons wheeled to Collingwood on Friday evening to spend the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Young.

Visitors with Mrs. Lyons and family over the week end and on Sunday were: Mr. and Mr Russell White of Saugeen Jct., Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Little, Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Magee and Delbert of Toronto, Jim Hale and Mr. and Mrs Lloyd Young.

Mother's Day service was held at Mt. Zion on Sunday, when Dr. Mercer gave a splendid address based on the fifth commandment: "Honor thy father and thy mother." His talk was based on "Mother."

Mt. Zion Sunday School is to commence next Sunday at 1 p.m. It is hoped there will be good interest shown in the S. S. this summer, to make it worth while carrying on.

Clear telephone lines for ALL-OUT PRODUCTION

Your telephone is part of a vast interlocking system now carrying an abnormal wartime load. Don't let needless delays hold up messages on which production efficiency may depend.

OTHER "WARTIME TELEPHONE TACTICS"

1. BE SURE you have the right number . . . consult the directory.
2. ANSWER promptly when the bell rings.
3. BE BRIEF. Clear your line for the next call.
4. USE OFF-PEAK hours for your Long Distance Calls.

These things may look trifling, but on 6,500,000 daily telephone calls, they are very important.

early morning darkness to Cintra, the airport that is used by British, Dutch, German and Italian planes. And so to England.

Seven Days in Portugal

On the return trip, I spent seven days in Lisbon, which was about five too many. It was mid-October when autumn storms were interfering with the Clipper schedules. At first, it seemed, I might have to wait ten days for a place on a Clipper; then it was more indefinite. It might be three weeks. As it has since turned out, it might be never. A prominent Canadian who returned a few weeks later had to go by way of Africa, Brazil and Trinidad to get out of Lisbon. The city is full of people trying to get out. For some of them, it is a matter of life and death. They must leave before the Germans get them. A place on the Clipper was not to be measured in mere dollars then (though it cost over $500, westbound). So I stayed in Lisbon with seven other Canadians, and as the days passed slowly, our plight became so desperate that we returned at last on a refugee ship, "part of a cargo of cork," as Bishop Renison puts it.

As I have said, Lisbon is beautiful from the air. So is the rest of Portugal that I had seen from the plane. From the ground, parts of the capital city are beautiful and everything is interesting. But under its picturesque exterior, there lurk dangers, even in peace time. Now the whole city is full of danger and intrigue.

For the first time, the question of money began to bother us, when we learned we might be in Lisbon indefinitely. We could bring only $40 each in American money out of England under the strict wartime rules. Out of that, we had to pay our fares home from New York. Other expenses began to come up. We held a conference and pooled our resources at last, finding that we had just enough to stay one week at our hotel in Lisbon. We knew nothing of the language For two days, we lived like paupers, hoarding every escudo, till the British Embassy came to our aid and guaranteed our hotel bill.

Headquarters of the Gestapo

We stayed at the Hotel Victoria in Lisbon, not at the expensive Palacia. It had been recommended to me by an American foreign correspondent in London. "It's new and clean," he said, "so long as you don't mind staving in the same hotel as the head of the German Gestapo in Portugal."

I laughed that off. In London that sounded like an added adventure. so, on my recommendation, we stayed at the Victoria. It was new, and clean, and cheap, and the meals were good. And we saw the head of the Gestapo, not just once but too often. His men kept a close watch on the eight Canadians. It gets on your nerves in a few days.

The Avenida da Liberdade is the main street of Lisbon. The name as you may guess, means "Avenus of Liberty." It stretches north and south up a broad valley between Lisbon's ten hills. The avenue is reputed to be one of the most beautiful in all the world. I don't doubt it. It is wide. Down each side is a broad roadway. In the centre, is a four-lane highway. In between the outer strip and the centre, are gardens with palm trees and edible chestnuts and benches to sit on under the palms and on the grass. Here and there are sidewalk cafes, where everything can be had to drink from ice cream sodas and strong coffee to much stronger things. The roadway circles around many monuments or fountains with goldfish swimming in the waters. And all the sidewalks are of mosaic—little pieces of colored marble laboriously laid by hand into patterns. Not only are there scrolls and flowers, but the history of Portugal is written there for those who can read the language.

Up and down the Avenida, there is a steady stream of traffic. On the roadways at the side, old-fashioned street cars with open sides pass every few seconds. I never saw so many street cars on one street anywhere. The automobiles are mostly tiny cars and one could ride half a mile in a taxi for six American cents. Most of the people are on foot, many of them with bare feet.

There is poverty everywhere in Portugal and it intrudes even on to the beautiful Avenida. Hundreds of women pass in an hour, with baskets on there heads containing silvery fish or grapes or flowers. Men carry cases of wine or heavier loads. Many of them have little fancy wicker baskets with a lid and handle. I was curious about them. One day I followed an old lady. She stopped occasionally to pick things off the street. At last she sat on a bench and I sat down beside her. she opened her hamper. Inside were little bits of metal. On the lid of the basket, she had a horseshoe magnet. With the magnet, she tested all the metal scraps. The iron ones she put in one pile, the non-ferrous in another. There's no need for salvage campaigns in Lisbon. Nothing goes to waste.

Canadians are paying heaver taxes than ever, but taxes were perhaps never more cheerfully paid.

This gasoline rationing may not be an unmixed evil if it clamps down on the wild wedding parades.

8TH LINE OSPREY

Mrs. Wm. Hanley has not been enjoying very good health for the past couple of weeks. Her many friends here wish for her complete restoration.

Recent visitors at the Hawkins home were: Mr. and Mrs. Sam McNab and Alex. of Chatsworth, Mr. Walter Saigeon and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Saigeon and family, Hanover.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Somers of Fern Glen and Mr. Vernon Somers of Guelph spent the week end at the parental home.

Mr. Jim Haley of Badjeros and Mr. Pat Haley of Melancthon were week end visitors with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Magee of Toronto spent the week end with their son, Gerald, here.

A very large circle of friends of L.A.C. Jim Giblin of Yorkton, Sask., met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Somers on Friday evening to welcome him and spend a few hours in his company ere his departure. During the course of the evening Mr. Bill Stephens read an address and Mr. Jim Haley made the presentation of a wrist watch as a constant reminder of loyal hearts and true around his old home and vicinity of 8th Line, Osprey. The address was signed by Wilfred Haley, Lloyd Stephens and Mervin Somers.

Which side of an apple pie is the left side? The part which isn't eaten.

It is reported from Germany that Marshal Goering is sick. We hope it is nothing trivial.

THE RED CROSS NEEDS $9,000,000 NOW!

● It is only through the Canadian Red Cross Society that anybody in Canada can send food parcels to any Canadian, British, Australian or New Zealand prisoner-of-war anywhere.

This is but one of the great tasks of the Canadian Red Cross; great tasks require great effort and much money.

More than 40,000 prisoners-of-war food parcels are sent overseas by the Red Cross every week. This number must be more than doubled to meet the actual need. More than a million such parcels have already been sent to prisoners-of-war.

It all costs money. The Canadian Red Cross Society has not campaigned nationally for funds since October, 1940. It now asks urgently for $9,000,000 in the only national campaign for war service funds to be authorized by the Government this year.

Every dollar contributed by you is wisely dealt with and economically administered. All Red Cross accounts are subject to scrutiny by the Auditor-General of Canada.

The Canadian Red Cross has given enormous assistance to the injured and homeless in bombed areas in Britain. At Coventry and Hull, in devastated London, Plymouth, Bristol and Liverpool, the Canadian Red Cross was there. Millions of articles of clothing, shoes, blankets and other comforts have been distributed.

Thousands of children in Britain have been made orphans by the war. The Canadian Red Cross has fed and clothed many of these homeless ones and found them shelter.

The Canadian Red Cross Society maintains Enquiry Bureaus through which families in Canada obtain information regarding missing relatives. Through these Bureaus, prisoners-of-war or missing civilians are located. The work is carried on in co-operation with the International Red Cross at Geneva, Switzerland.

The Canadian Red Cross has supplied 86 mobile kitchen units for Britain's fire fighters. These units are equipped to go into bombed areas and feed 250 workers at a time.
