White who accompanied her, deserves much credit also. A good programme was enjoyed by all.

A. Kernahan, Maxwell P.O., not later than April 1.

The following letter from Alex. Morrison, who judged the horses at the fall fair, will explain itself.

Georgetown, Dec. 1

George Hawton, Feversham:

Sir,—In answer to your letter I would say that the men that were in the ring or anyone else didn't try to use any influence with me as to how the prizes were to be awarded. I knew nothing of any made-up team and had I known I would not have awarded them any prize. These facts I am prepared to prove.

Yours truly—Hugh Morrison.

According to the story, some words ensued between the two, and the boss in anger pommelled his man-servant with the above result.

A tame imitation of the Charge of the Light Brigade occurred on the main street here on Thursday afternoon when Mr. Alex. McCarter's driver, while being driven by his son, Reggie, became unmanageable, and wheeling towards the sidewalk made a wild charge at Beningers barber shop. For a time it looked as if it would land with all fours in amongst the upholstery and lather, but a friendly barber pole interposed and got the brunt of the attack. While stopping the flight the collision unloosened the knob on top of the pole and hurled it against the large plate glass in front of the Agricultural Office, shattering a $60.00 window and making more graft for the glass trust. As the window was not insured, a nice point in law has arisen as to who will have to bear the loss, the landlord, the the tenant or the owner of the horse.

Mrs. Watts was the first speaker, her subject being "Why [illegible]?" Mrs. Watts is a gifted speaker [illegible] held the audience spellbound [illegible] witticisms and pointed remarks.
