SAVE OOD RAGS TO HELP WIN THE WAR

Every woman in every home has a hundred opportunities to be a vital cog in the war machine. For instance, the Director of Salvage at Ottawa points to rags. They'e desperately needed for war,—for wrapping delicately milled parts, for airplane wipers on airdromes; in army workshops, and aboard Canadian ships. Homes are the greatest source of supply.

In appealing for rags, as for other materials, the Salvage Director says, "Do the job carefully and thoroughly so the material can be moved to the 'front line' fast."

Save white woollens, colored woollens, coatings and suitings, and cottons. Wrap each class in separate parcels, and, please, don't put clean and soiled rags together. Put old carpets and scrap sacking in separate containers. Pack in cartons or old sacks and get them to your local salvage organization or direct to a dealer in our community right away.

Stephens pointed out that the main object of these meetings is for the Federation of Agriculture to get the farmers' opinions on matters vitally important to the farmer, and he stressed the fact that the farmers should take this opportunity to co-operate with the officials and state their opinions clearly, concisely and without prejudice. Then they can reasonably expect results.

2. SPEAK distinctly, directly into the mouthpiece.
3. ANSWER promptly when the bell rings.
4. BE BRIEF. Clear your line for the next call.

These things may look trifling, but on 6,500,000 daily telephone calls, they are very important.
