was all right in three or four days. Mr. Jas. Jackson met with a precisely similar accident some months ago, but did not get off as easily as Mr. Junkin, as he was laid up for some time with a sprained ankle.

THE RAILROAD BRIDGE.—Mr. Ferguson, road master, and two other employees of The G. T. R. were here last week "seeing about" the new railroad bridge across the Fenelon river, and, from what we can learn, it is probable that the bridge will be built somewhere below the falls, probably near Powles's landing, which will do away with the necessity of a swing, and that the station will be moved to this side of the river. The appearance of the railroad officials so soon after the election is attributed by some of the most enthusiastic Tories to the benign influence of Sam Hughes.

Condemning the Boodling Tariff.

Montreal Star (Conservative,) Our great need at this moment is a better chance for the farmers. The census shows that the exodus from the rural parts of the country is alarming, and unless the taxes are lightened very appreciably on the goods that he consumes and every chance given him to market his produce, the back-bone of this country will be broken while we are fattening the cities. A continuation of the present tariff means suicide and surrender. A few more years under its screw pressure and Mr. Laurier will not go to Boston to talk in a manly tone of trade treaties, but we will fain send him to Washington to sue for admission into the Union. Resources must be husbanded to face a siege, and in a free country like ours, unless the loyalists insist on such a course with the approval of the men having a stake in the land, the thoughtless and hungry will force a capitulation.

The shooting of an express messenger on a Central Hudson train, the rifling of a valuable safe, the flight of the robber on the engine of another train from which he drove the crew at the point of a revolver, a running fight from the engine cab for miles chased by another engine and filled with railway men, and final capture of the desperado by a sheriff's posse in a swamp after a wild pursuit across the country, are some of the sensational features of a most daring attempt at train robbery on the Central Hudson railway last Saturday, which casts in the shade as an exhibition of coolness and nerve the famous exploits of the Jesse James band or other outlaws of western fame. The robber has been fully identified as Oliver Curtis Perry of Syracuse, suspected of the Utica train robbery of last October, and has confessed that he is the man wanted for that attempt.
