Owen Sound

An accident that very nearly proved to be a fatality occurred on Saturday when little Jean Quinlan, daughter of Mrs. Andrew Quinlan, East Third Avenue, was the victim. The little girl was playing in her father's yard when a load of firewood was being brought into the yard. A long piece of timber caught on a tree and knocked several small pieces from the load. One of these hit the little girl on the forehead, opening the skin to the skull and rendering her unconscious. The wound was dressed, and though it was not until next morning that the child recovered her normal condition, she is now thought to be on the way to recovery.

To be quietly sitting reading your paper on your front porch and have a rifle bullet suddenly strike you and lodge in your foot is, to say the least, a decidedly unpleasant experience, but this is exactly what happened to Mr. William Whittaker on Friday afternoon about 4 o'clock. Mr. Whittaker came out on the front porch in the afternoon to have a look at the papers and just got nicely settled when—zip!—a bullet whizzed over his shoulder and hit his boot, penetrating his foot. For a moment he hardly realized what had happened or that he had been shot, but when the blood began to fill his boot and he saw the hole that the bullet had made, he summoned help and Dr. Brewster was immediately sent for. The bullet was removed and it was found that it had been shot from a 32-calibre rifle. It came from the north, but a strange thing about the occurrence is that no one heard the shot. A little child was sitting beside Mr. Whittaker when the accident happened and the bullet whizzed by only a few inches from her. Had it struck either the child or Mr. Whittaker in the head, instant death would have been the result. Where the bullet came from or who fired it no one knows, and it is hardly likely the guilty party will make his foolhardy feat known. It is thought, however, that the shot was fired by someone on the hill, probably at birds in the trees, and it was descending when it struck Mr. Whittaker. The wound is a painful one.

It may be said, roughly, that the cost of hydro-electric developments in Norway varies between $24 and $60, per horse-power, except in the lowlands, where the falls are lower and the cost of development may run as high as $160 per horse power at the power station. The Norwegian Government concedes water-power sites for a limited period, the yearly tax being based on horse-power. At the termination of the concession, the plant automatically falls back to the government and new agreements have to be negotiated. The government itself is shortly to develop an important power site at Nore, where a plant of 228,000 horse power capacity is to be constructed A part of the power generated is to be transmitted a distance of 78 miles to the coast, where it can be sold at $8 per horse-power-year.—L. G. D.

Durham

Wednesday afternoon will be observed as a half holiday by the merchants during July and August.

Hanover is getting a Government drill hall, and we hope it will be useful as well as ornamental. Durham has an armory building, but.—

Early in the season the peach crop was predicted a failure, but recent reports from the Niagara peninsula indicate good prospects. Cherries were so plentiful, and the prices so low that many were left unpicked. The low prices didn't seem to reach as far as Durham, as prices asked here were considered high enough.

Last week we referred to an offer received by Principal Allan to take charge of Madoc Model school at $1800 a year. Since then the Board here has decided to increase his salary to $1500, and Mr. Allan will remain. Having his property here seems a sufficient tie to cause an annual sacrifice of $300 a year. Even at the increased salary the Board would have difficulty in filling the position by an outsider. Mr. Allan's former salary was $1200.—Chronicle

Walkerton

The Underwriter's Inspector, who recently visited Walkerton and Inspected the fire-fighting apparatus here, has handed in his report, which was read at the Town Council meeting on Monday night, and as a demonstration of high kicking and loud howling that document takes the cake. The Inspector, it seems, want more water mains put in Walkerton, wants the hydrants repaired and new pumps installed at the reservoir. He also wants two or three paid fireman to sleep in the Town Hall, and makes numerous other suggestions all tending to heap more expense on the already burdened tax-payers here. In fact, these Inspectors seem to be regular bull-frogs for croaking, and the exactions they make in their reports would put the taxpayers financially in the hole for many years.

While painting the steeple on the Catholic Church here one night last week, Jack Murphy, the steeple-jack, fell asleep and when discovered was taking a comfortable snoose on a rope seat about 200 feet above the ground. As he was reported to have been drinking heavy before going up, fears were entertained that the booze would make him top-heavy and that while under the influence of Morpheus he would topple forward and fall into the hands of the coffin trust. Efforts were consequently made to arouse him from his slumber by shaking the rope, but as these were unavailing he was left to finish his nap, there being some doubt as to which would he would ultimately wake up in. He finally issued safely from his dreams and came down, when he was subsequently placed on the Indian List to avoid a similar future recurrence.—Herald and Times.

Night Made Beautiful

Electricity as an ornament will be a striking feature of this year's Toronto Exhibition. You'll remember a year ago those little electric bulbs flickering like fireflies among the leaves of the trees. That was only a starter for a series of electric novelties that will this year make the grounds a vision of loveliness by night.

Above the entrance will be the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes entwined, with the dove of peace floating over them while at the sides of the entrance will be two electric panels, one emblematic of Canada and the other of United States.

The Grand Plaza has been strung with a network of wires and will be canopied with twinkling electric stars.

These wich other decorations will make it Electric Year as well as Peace Year at the Canadian National.

Victoria Corners

We wish to correct the error in last week's issue. We mentioned the the death of Mr. Heard's Uncle, but gave the wrong name. It was the Uncle Herald at Toronto. The interment took place at Flesherton cemetery on Tues. Mrs. Heard is visiting with Mr. Will Heard.

We congratulate Miss Mina Heard on her success at the entrance exam.

Miss Ada Acheson of Proton Station is visiting her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Moore.

Dundalk

A quiet wedding was solemnized in the Presbyterian Church, Vancouver, B. C., on Wednesday, July 1st, by Rev. G. A. Wilson. The contracting parties were Miss Maud May Bushfield and Mr. Earl Phillips Cornett, formerly of Dundalk. After the ceremony the bridal party proceeded to the bride's home in Vancouver where luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Cornett left on the afternoon boat for Victoria where they will reside. —Herald.

The well at the school is in a very unsafe condition. The board covering is in a dilapidated state. The boards are loose and there is plenty of room for a child or an animal to drop in. This should be remedied at once.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Bolger were in Owen Sound last week attending the funeral of the late Mr. Henry, a brother-in law of Mrs. Bolger's.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hutchinson, of Swift Current, Sask. who were recently married at Kimberley, were guests at Mrs. Hanbury's this week.

Creemore

Harry Rinn started to celebrate early Monday morning and just as he was concluding he got a little too near an explosion of gunpowder and was rather badly burned on the face and neck.

Wes. Johnston, butcher, had a carload of cattle brought up from Toronto last week. He found he could buy them cheaper there than he can from the farmers around home, and also with a great deal less trouble.

Wright Bell and a few of his neighbors enjoyed a pic-nic at the beach the other day, though one little incident rather dampened Mr. Bell's enjoyment. He got on his horse's back to ride it into the lake when the animal, objecting to too much water, made a quick motion to return to the shore, leaving Mr. Bell to continue his trip across the Georgian Bay alone if he wished. As Mr. Bell dropped on to a large stone, however, and received a rather painful bruise, he thought he would make his way ashore again rather than go any further into the drink.—Star.
