Mr. and Mrs. Herb Allen, Glenelg, were in town on Saturday last and were horribly surprised when they were told by a telephone message from a neighbor that the house they had left that morning was destroyed by fire. A passer-by had noticed flames coming through the roof and made a rush to the scene only to find that inside was a roaring furnace and he was too late to save anything.

Providentially Mrs. Thos. Banks was spared from a fatal accident. Recently while on her way to Markdale with her brother, Mr. Colin McArthur and some of his family. she was sitting with two others in the back seat of the sleigh on the outside and hearing some noise behind she turned round and called to her brother that a runaway team was coming. He whipped up the team to get out of their way and the jerk made her fall backward with her body hanging over. Her niece grabbed her by the clothes and held her till the runaway team dashed past, being afraid that they might run over her if they stopped, her head rubbing on the hard snow in the meantime. Happily, all's well that ends well, as, though stunned for a time, she is now none the were.—Review.

Those who were "in" last week are improving but slowly, while others this week are laying in right and left. Rod and Gun

"Injun Bones and Huskies" by J. R. Fraser in March Rod and Gun is no lap dog story but an account of a desperate encounter which two adventurers in the far north had with a band of ferocious huskies from which they narrowly escaped with their lives. "That Cub of Patrick's" is a somewhat amusing tale—though Pat himself found the experience very provoking—of a captured bear cub that proved one too much for his captor. "A visit to the Nakimu Caves of Glacier Park, B. C.," "Windobin's Cabin." "The Passing of the Buffalo" and other stories and articles, along with the regular departments, go to make up a fine March number. This sportsman's publication is issued at Woodstock, Ont., by W. J. Taylor, Limited.
