SWP

SWP means Sherwin-Williams Paint (Prepared). This is the best paint for you to use because it is made of pure materials—pure lead, pure zinc, pure Linseed Oil, and pure coloring pigments which are thoroughly mixed and ground in scientific proportions by powerful machinery.

It is better than the old fashioned hand-mixed paint because the materials are put together according to correct chemical formulae which have been tested out in a practical way. Its fine grinding makes it cover nearly 50% more surface than hand-mixed paint.

SWP is an economical paint because it will cover the greatest amount of surface, wear longest, and look best.—Ask us for color cards.

Gordon, the 3-year-old son of John Scott, Sydenham, died of sunstroke.

Meaford has opened a Saturday farmers' market.

With enough money buried in the cellar to buy square meals for many a year, the wife and child of Fred Hodge of Gorrie were found to be starving to be starving to death. They had been living on the charity of their neighbors, and when found were in a state of collapse for want of food. The constable found buried in the cellar a large amount of perfectly good currency, which the husband buried as soon as he received his pay.

Public opinion is changing slowly toward bird protection because it is becoming convinced of its economic advantages to agriculture as well as the sentimental value of birds. The English and Germans recognized more than a hundred years ago the necessity of keeping nature balanced by encouraging bird life and holding insect life in check.

A strange disease has recently been noticed by some of the chicken fanciers at Clinton. Chickens seem to be well and hearty and scratching around, then in a few moments fall dead, or seem to lose the use of their limbs, at least, before expiring. One man has lost eighteen fine birds, another seven, and another nine. They cannot fathom this strange malady. All the chickens thus dying have reached the size when they would dress at about one and a half pounds.

Wm. Nesbitt, an unmarried farmer who lived about half way between Bradford and Bond Head, was found unconscious in his stable and died the following night. Just how Mr. Nesbitt met his debth may never be known. He went to his stable about 9 a.m. to attend to an injured horse, and a few hours afterwards was found by his housekeeper lying in an adjoining stall to the horse in an unconscious condition. From a wound on the chin it is supposed that the horse had hit Mr. Nesbitt with his knees while dressing its wounds.

John Pratt, a retired farmer, aged about 60, of Orangeville, had a miraculous escape from instant death during an electrical storm. Mr. Pratt was on his farm, lot 5 on the 5th line, Amaranth, when the storm broke. He took refuge from the rain under a tree but decided that was not a safe place and went to his driving shed, and while standing in the doorway was struck by lightning on the head and knocked unconscious. The crown of his hat was torn away, his hair singed and the electric fluid paralyzed both arms. Mr. Pratt suffered great pain but is about recovered, although he will be sensitive to electric storms for the rest of his days.

Prohibition is certainly bad for business. We understand that in Russia it has stopped the building of new prisons, and the doctors in the hospitals claim that business is falling off considerably. We have not heard from the undertakers, but we imagine that they also will have reason to complain. However, the officials in the savings tanks have been compelled to ask for an increase in their staff, in some cases even doubling the staff, and in spite of the war the number of depositors has greatly increased. Certainly prohibition does damage certain lines of business, but in most cases the businesses are such as we can well dispense with.—Guardian.
