Walkerton

By rushing out of his pool room and catching a runaway horse of the Dominion Express Co., which was tearing madly down street on Monday morning last, Art McCartney, the well known baseball player, demonstrated that he could catch something besides balls, and so worked on the admiration of the spectators that they presented him with a large boquet of Canadian Burdocks as a "strong testimony of their esteem, together with a huge leather medal that covered his manly breast like a shoemaker's apron. There was certainly nothing small about the presentation.

In refusing a gift to the Patriotic Picnic the other day a local merchant is reported to have told the lady canvassers that by staying at home and tending to business he was sacrificing more than the boys at the front. As this man has the fear of the Lord in him and wouldn't likely spring something he didn't believe, we approach this great fountain of light on our hands and knees and would humbly beseech him to dispel our darkness and tell us what he means. Daniel, the man who interpreted dreams, would, we believe, be hung up on this one, and be forced to admit that as a vision it has 'em all beat.

Mrs. Jack Griffin last week received from her husband, who is with a British regiment on the firing line at the front, a portion of a German rifle magazine which had been captured from a sniper who had been concealed in a house and was picking off the British wounded as they limped back from the trenches. Griffin and five others laid for the sniper and when he issued out of the house in the evening they riddled him with bullets. The rifle that had done such dastardly work was dissected and part of the magazine sent by Griffin to his wife in Walkerton who now has it on exhibition in Fox's jewelry window. A heavy tin box filled with tobacco and battered almost flat by a shrapnel shell which struck and killed a British soldier, from whose pocket it was afterwards taken by Mr. Griffin, is also on view at Mr. Fox's.—Herald and Times.

War Spectacle at Exhibition

The mammoth war spectacle, "The March of the Allies" and the "Review of the Fleet," will be the big scenic production in front of the Grand Stand at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, and will be one of the most elaborate ever staged and a fitting climax to each day's entertainment in this "Patriotic Year."

The background is the ancient city of Calais, saved by the Canadians when they so gallantly stopped the German drive at St. Julien at such enormous cost. Its picturesque chatteaus and historic envoirment adapt themselves admirably to reproduction. On either side beneath frowning cliffs are seen military camps with the soldiers of the allied armies in all the hustle, bustle and action of war time. The brilliant uniforms of the Field Marshalls, Generals, etc., add splendor to an impressive scene.

Suddenly the fleet appears over the horizon under full steam with the Queen Bess leading the first battle line and the Lion in advance of the others. The Iron Duke majestically appears with Admiral Jellico aboard, and, as she passes between the watch dogs of the Empire lined up in battle array, the Admiral is greeted with salvoes of broadsides.

It will be a faithful portrayal of the scene just before war was declared last summer when the fleet had been mobilized on the orders of Churchill off the British coast.

The connonading continues as the officers go ashore to review the troops, which swing past the Grand Stand in the final wonderful tableau. It will be a panorama of Empire greatness, a picture of such striking reality as to evoke a veritable hysteria of patriotic fervor among the thousands who will nightly crowd the Grand Stand.

The Record, the newly founded paper in Wiarton, has suspended publication for the second time.

An Oily Conundrum

Mr. F. G. Karstedt, merchant of this place, owns a 32 foot well at the rear of his premises. This well has been used for watering stock but not for culinary purposes, owing to its peculiar and unpleasant taste. On Friday last Mr. Karstedt undertook to pump out the well, but found after pumping a few pails full that coal oil was coming out instead of water. He pumped severals barrels full from the well and still the oil came out. Next morning it was the same, a muddy looking mixture of oil and water.

Just what it all means is yet a conundrum. The well is forty or fifty feet from where any coal oil is kept, and Mr. Karstedt says there has never been any leakage. Neither has the well been disturbed. No person would be likely to waste so much oil for the sake of a hoax as has been pumped out. Mr. Karstedt strained some of the mixture and from about a quart got half a lamp full of a yellowish oil which burned quite freely in the lamp. An explanation of the strange phenomenon is still to be discovered.

An Unsatisfactory Theory

The opinion given by Detective Reburn that Mrs. Rebecca Winters, the aged woman who mysteriously disappeared some time ago in Osprey Township, sank in a marsh, should hardly satisfy those who are interested in the matter. The detective, after making a few inquiries, has advanced this theory of the disappearance and apparently the authorities have allowed the matter to drop right there. A thorough organized search of the whole vicinity should be made and no stone left unturned to discover the fate of the missing woman. So far, no conclusive proof has been brought forward that she sank in the marsh, and until there is some proof, this theory should not satisfy the public—Owen Sound Sun.

Rod and Gun

The August issue of Rod and Gun in Canada published at Woodstock, Ont., by W. J. Taylor Limited, and now on the news stands, makes good reading for the sportsman. Its stories of hunting and fishing and "been there" descriptions of various outings in Canadian woods or on Canadian waters are in line with the vacation season and the magazine is one well worth while tucking into the club or dunnage bag when setting out on the annual summer vacation.

On the arrival of the steamer Germanic at Owen Sound on Wednesday night from Collingwood, the police were given charge of a little seven-year-old boy. Shortly after the boat left Collingwood he was discovered on the boat. He was in his bare feet and wearing his every-day clothes and evidently did not belong to any of the travellers aboard. He explained that his uncle said that he could go to the boat whenever he liked, but evidently he had not anticipated the sailing of the boat in time to get off. A good wash, a hearty supper and a comfortable bed relieved his distress, and his mother who was advised by 'phone from Meaford, asked that he be handed over to an aunt in Owen Sound, which request the police complied with.—Bulletin.
