Letters From The Boys In Khaki

France, July 21, 1915.

Dear Editor,—Will you kindly allow me space in your paper to thank the citizens of Flesherton for sending me the parcel. It contained with other valuable things a wrist watch, which is just what I needed, and is keeping perfect time. I can assure you it often reminds me of many happy boyhood days spent in the old home town.

Kindly accept my heartfelt thanks for your thoughtfulness and kindness.

I remain yours sincerely,

—SERGT. T. E. DAVIS.
Toronto Regiment.

Mrs. J. Jamieson received a letter last week from her son, Bert, who is an invalid from gas poisoning in England. It read as follows :

Sharpeton, Salcombe, Eng.
July 27, 1915.

Dear mother,—A line to let you know how I am making out. I am still at the convalescent home but expect to leave any day, going back to the depot and get a Canadian doctor. These old doctors here don't know much. They have always been used to doctoring old people and don't know any hing about gas cases. My lungs are in bad shape and the bronchitis is still going. So I am going to try one of our own and see if I can get into a Canadian hospital. The Canadian hospitals have a great name over here and the fellows are all doing their best to get into one.

I received a parcel the other day with the pipes and taffy, but almost all were spoiled on account of the apples going bad. I have not received any papers lately, but got the Porcupine paper today from Elwin.

I don't know what they are going to do with us. I heard they were sending all the wounded home, that is of the first contingent. I am not particular what turns up. Best regards to all and tell the people who sent the parcel that I was very glad to get it, and thanks a thousand times for it. —T. A. JAMIESON.

Bill Routledge's Experience

Arno'd Thurston, writing to his parents in Flesherton from England, says :

I met a wounded Artemesia boy the other day in the person of Bill Rutledge of Ceylon—otherwise known as "Moon' Rutledge. Bill enlisted at Lethbridge the morning war was declared, and was dratted to the 10th battalion. He was in the trenches for a couple of months, but did not get hurt until near the last of April, at St. Julien. This is how it happened :

His company was going out to the trenches one night quite late. It was very dark, but the Germans continually sent up star shells and they were also shelling the advancing Canadians intermittently. Finally a piece of shrapnel struck Bill on the ankle and he plunged forward into a pit made by a "Jack Johnson." He rolled over and over down the steep sides of the pit, and landed in a pool of muddy water at the bottom, in which he lost his rifle. After crawling out of the water he went back again to get the rifle, then crawled back once more to the side of the pit.

His ankle was badly torn and wrenched, so he was unable to walk, and quite unable to climb out of the pit, which he said was about twenty feet deep. Nor could he make anyone hear him, so there was only one thing to do—wait. Fortunately his pack contained a tin of bully beef and a couple of pounds of hard biscuits, and there was plenty of water in the bottom of the pit. On this meagre fare he subsisted for five days and nights when the field ambulance finally located him, and he was taken back to hospital.

Bill was not in any bayonet charges but says he has accounted for at least one German, which is more than they have done for him. This was a sniper who was up a tree several hundred yards from the Canadian trench. The Germans continually turned searchlights on the trenches, and this sniper was getting rather too many Canadians for comfort ; so the Captain ordered Bill out to get him. The latter left the trench, made a wide detour around the sniper to a wood on the opposite side, and in the darkness climbed quite close to the German's tree without being molested. One shot brought the man down, and Bill smashed his rifle on the tree, took his amunition, and returned to his own trench. It was very simple, but the company was not both red any more from that tree.
