The Clarksburg Review kicks because the streets are not watered more frequently. Now what do you think of that? Most towns in this neck of the woods are growling because they have had too much sprinkling this summer. And both sprinkling and discontent are even more prevalent in the country districts. Is Clarksburg in a dry belt of its own?

The Canadian Pacific railway will again be one of the exhibitors at the forthcoming exhibition to be held in Toronto, and, in addition to the display of Canada's golden west product, a new departure will be added taking the form of a Railway Kitchen and dining car. The Oil Question Is Still Unanswered

Oil still continues to come out of the Karstedt well and its source is still a matter of conjecture. It has been pumped to the bottom almost every day for the past three weeks, but the oil continues to come in as great a quantity as ever, if not greater. Last week Mr. Karstedt sent a quantity of the oil to the Department of Mines for analysis and the result of this report is awaited with keen interest.

The well is curbed, about four feet in diameter to within eight or ten feet of the bottom and about 3½ feet from that down. The curbing is now a mass of oil from top to bottom, owing to the pumping.

On Monday the editor himself took a trip to the bottom of this well to see for himself. There was only an inch or so of water in the bottom, the rest having been pumped out. At one side of the curbing the spring was boiling up and a pint of the liquid fresh out of the ground was secured. When brought to the top this showed a decided layer of oil on the surface, proving conclusively that the oil comes out of the ground along with the water.

As to the sensations of a trip to the bottom of that well: Imagine yourself shut up in a gasoline tank with nothing to breathe but gasoline and you have it. A minute or two of it is enough for any man to stand, and you taste it in your breath for hours afterward, while it makes the stomach nauseous and the head ache. A week or so ago it was not nearly so bad.

During the past week many strangers have visited it and went away with a puzzled air. The thing is a connundrum too deep for any person who has as yet tried to unravel it.

Wm. Coe, Cashtown, was shingling his barn a few days ago, when he slipped and fell off, breaking his right arm above the wrist, cut his forehead and sprained his back.

Walkerton

The immorality that is rampant on the Bruce Peninsula is filling up the Children's Aid Society at Walkerton with wards and is giving the county a black eye that, in the opinion of no less an authority than Crown Attorney Dixon, the time has arrived when an inspector should be appointed to constantly patrol the peninsula and rid the territory of these numerous cesspools of vice. Secretary McLennan of the Children's Aid Society, who has been through that country, went so far as to say that there was no religion above the Sauble. Although the peninsula contributes more prisoners to the Walkerton jail than any other part of Bruce, yet for one man that is brought to justice dozens up there escape. With such a condition of things right in our own country, it is a little presumptious for our churches to be dilating so much on far away heathen and training their guns for long distance shots, when sinners abound so plentiful within such close range of the gallant pulpiteers here.

Robert J. Hornby of Wiarton, who was arrested by the police in Owen Sound, was brought to the Walkerton jail by High Constable Ward on Monday to await his trial before Judge Klein here on the serious charge of carnally knowing Florence Amelia Bannister, a little 8-year-old girl. According to evidence submitted at the preliminary hearing before Magistrates J. A. Chapman and D. J. Izzard at Port Elgin on Monday, Hornby was married on the 14th of May, 1911, to Mrs. Bannister, the child's mother, who was not living with her lawful husband at that time. About a week after they were married, Florence went to Toronto, but returned in the winter of 1912 and lived for nearly two years with her mother and her step-father, Hornby. The little girl in her evidence accused Hornby of frequently committing against her person one of the most heinous and indecent acts known in the criminal statutes. Dr. F. H. Wells, of Port Elgin, who testified at the trial, swore that he had examined the girl and found evidence that she had been frequently and most indecently assaulted. Hornby, who is about 41 years of age and a laborer, was sent up to a higher tribunal for trial, and was remanded to the Walkerton jail for safe keeping.—Bruce Herald and Times.

A Grey County Regiment

The officers of the 31st Regiment, Grey County, have submitted an offer to the Minister of Militia to recruit a Regiment of 1100 men to be known as the Grey County Regiment, to go to the front as a unit, and should the offer be accepted recruiting will be commenced immediately. There are lots of young men who have volunteered for service provided they can go in a body and be under the command of officers they are acquainted with and be treated like ordinary human beings. The idea of shifting men from one regiment to another is a poor one and those offering themselves do not care to be among complete strangers all the time. If the Militia Department look favorably on this offer this entire company of men will be drilled and kept together from the time they leave Grey County until they return unless killed or taken prisoners of war. Already a large number of recruits have expressed a willingness to join for active service. It may be some two weeks before Col. Sam Hughes will be back that his consent can be obtained. His decision is being awaited with much interest.
